Name Liberal Or Be Beaten, Roosevelt Tells Party

Young Democrats Warned Triumph Won't Be Easy In Next Election

President Roosevelt warned critics within his own party last night that Democrats "can commit suicide by abandonment of the policies that brought" them to power.

For those who disagree with his policies, the President offered two "honorable courses—to join a party that more accurately mirrors their ideas, or to subordinate their prejudices and remain loyal."

The President expressed his views in a message read to 1,200 young Democrats preparing for the 1940 Presidential campaign in a Junior Jackson Day Dinner at the Mayflower Hotel.

Rebel Yells Heard

"In the campaign we are now approaching," he said, "there is just one agency potent enough to defeat the Democratic Party, and that is the Democratic Party itself. There is no use fooling ourselves. If we are to have a reactionary regime—or if that term is too horrific—call it a conservative regime, you may depend on it that it will be the other fellow's regime."

The words, read by Pitt Tyson Maner, president of the Young Democratic Clubs of America, brought applause and rebel yells from the young gathering.

Mr. Roosevelt's fighting words were caught up by Postmaster General Farley whose address went to a nationwide audience, and by the leaders of the party in House and Senate, Representative Rayburn, of Texas, and Senator Barkley, of Kentucky.

Sees G. O. P. Handicap

Farley warned Democrats not to "delude" themselves into thinking that 1940 would be another landslide.

"It would be silly and stupid for me or anyone else to assert that the smashing triumphs which the Democratic Party won over a bankrupt Republican Party is the last two Presidential elections will be repeated in 1940."

By inference, at least, Rayburn and Barkley indicated a belief that the fat majorities of 1932 and 1936 were things of the past.

"I detest," Rayburn said, "the kind of Democrats who are going around the country with their tails between their legs—already licked." Then he cited what he called the plight of the Republicans who "must defend 12 years of Harding, Coolidge and Hoover."

This brought some of the lustiest cheering of the evening.

"No Backward Step"

Rayburn passed on the challenge of the President to opponents of Administration policies by hammering out the words:

"There shall be no backward step."

Rayburn said there could be no basis for Democratic apprehension at least until the opposition had named its candidate and framed its platform. He included Mayor La Guardia of New York, a friend of the President, in listing a G. O. P. strategy board of "Hoover, Landon, Vandenberg, La Follette and Lemke."

Barkley asked his hearers to have the same faith in the President that democracies of the world have exhibited in their support of his peace message to Hitler and Mussolini.

Farley struck the same key by stating Democrats would stand on the Administration's record as the "permanent platform of the party."

Pessimism, he said, has no place in the Democratic outlook for 1940 . . . "I believe sincerely that the next President of the United States will be a Democrat."

The President's letter in full text follows:

My Young Friends:

It is to my great regret that I cannot be with you in this celebration in memory of the first President who demonstrated to the world that democracy was workable. On you now depends the future of the Democratic Party.

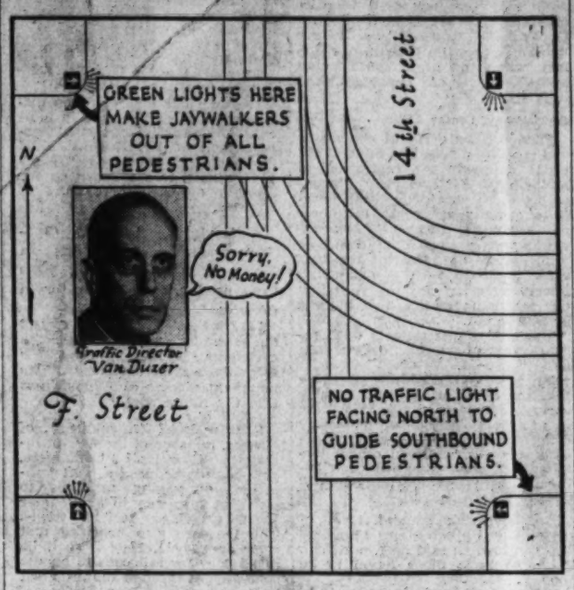
Suicide Corner No. 1

Green Light Means 'Go,' Eh? 'Go' Where?



GREEN LIGHTS HERE MAKE JAYWALKERS OUT OF ALL PEDESTRIANS.

Sorry, No Money!
Traffic Director Van Duzer
F. Street
NO TRAFFIC LIGHT FACING NORTH TO GUIDE SOUTHBOUND PEDESTRIANS.

A casual survey among Washington pedestrians indicated yesterday that Fourteenth and F streets northwest is the No. 1 nominee for "suicide corner."

Here is an intersection where two green lights are more dangerous than a red one.

To begin with, there is no traffic light on the southeast (National Press Club) corner of Fourteenth and F streets that flashes to the north. That is to say, a pedestrian on the northeast corner, preparing to cross over to the National Press Club corner, has no light on that corner to guide him.

Therefore, in order to know what the lights are saying, he has to look over to the Willard Hotel corner. He sees a greenish glow on that corner and starts over toward the Press Club.

The more agile he is, the more eager to obey the green light, the more dangerous it is for him. Although he probably doesn't know it, a green arrow light over on the northwest (Garfinckel) corner is beckoning motorists and street cars on F street to make a right turn into Fourteenth—this at the very time

Consolidation Of WPA, PWA Facing Test

Decision Expected On Byrnes Measure Early Next Week

The Byrnes bill consolidating Federal public works and relief agencies, including WPA and PWA, will be taken up in the Senate today, with a vote expected by the middle of next week.

As it stands, the measure deals solely with the creation of a public works agency, and provides a formula, based on population and number of unemployed, for allocating public works projects among the States. The bill requires each State to pay at least one-third the cost of projects within its borders.

A special committee of Republicans was named yesterday by Minority Leader McNary to work out a substitute measure which would give the States a larger degree of control over the public works program. Appointed to the committee were Senators Lodge, of Massachusetts, and Davis, of Pennsylvania (members of the special committee on unemployment and relief which favorably reported the Byrnes measure), and Senators Vandenberg, of Michigan, and Taft, of Ohio.

Split from Byrnes' original bill and now drawn up as a separate

Farley to Receive Pony if He Climbs On Without Help

Amarillo, Tex., April 19 (AP).—Postmaster General Farley—who comes to town May 17 to dedicate a postoffice—can have a Texas pony if he can stay astride it 10 seconds.

Editor Gene Howe made the offer today.

To avoid harm to the Postmaster General, Howe explained, five attendants will be on hand—one for the head and one for each of the animal's four legs.

All Mr. Farley will be asked to do is to "climb on the horse by himself."

Father Follows Son, Friend To Death Chair

Three Electrocuted In Ohio for Killing Officer in Gunfight

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, April 19.—Father, son and friend atoned with their lives tonight for the slaying of two Springfield, Ohio, peace officers.

Harry Chapman, 37, was first to be put to death because he was the first to enter the penitentiary. Following him were Henry Dingledine, 29, and his father, Harry, 56.

The three were convicted of the murder of Patrolman Martin Randolph, of Springfield, in a gun battle at the Dingledine cottage after robbery of a Springfield cafe operator September 3, 1937. The Dingledines also were convicted of killing Chief Deputy Sheriff Edward Furry.

Bandit Killed, Two Hurt

Robert Cornette, a bandit, met death in the gunfight, while Chapman and young Dingledine were wounded.

In almost monotonous procession, the three men marched one by one to the death chair with protests on their lips.

The wives of the condemned men and the two daughters of the elder Dingledine had left the penitentiary at the evening dinner hour after a long day of farewells.

Chapman, well-educated Chicagoan, spent his 13 months in the death cell writing a history of his crimes.

Clemency Refused

Two appeals to Gov. Bricker for executive clemency were refused. Chapman asked that his brother, John, who is in the penitentiary for bank robbery, be permitted to attend his funeral, with burial in the prison cemetery.

Henry Dingledine entered the death room rather jauntily, smoking a cigarette. He called "goodby" to several persons.

Harry Dingledine, the gray-haired father, walked into the chamber last, with a half-smoked cigar between his teeth.

Indians Ask Science to Leave 'Sodom and Gomorrah' Buried

Two-hundred and forty-nine years ago the Hopi Indians, who are highly religious, wiped out the village of Awoviti on what is now the second mesa on their reservation in north central Arizona, because it had become an equivalent of the Biblical Sodom and Gomorrah.

The facts were told to the white man for the first time yesterday, when the first delegation of the tribe in more than 50 years paid a visit to Washington.

They were divulged in order to explain the Hopi's determination to prevent the Peabody Institute of New York from continuing to dig in the ruins of Awoviti.

Permission for that exploration was given by the Indian Bureau before the tribe was given complete self-government under the Indian reorganization act of 1934. But the permission expires on August 28, and on that day the digging will stop, they declared yesterday.

The story was related as members of the delegation met at the Office of Indian Affairs in the Department of the Interior. First, there was a pow-wow among the tribesmen in their own language. Then Byron P. Adams, of Pollacca village, on the first mesa, a member of the Fire clan whose ancestors for

President Plans Start On Mergers

Consolidation of Lending Agencies, Including RFC, Is Reported at Hand

By Robert C. Albright.

President Roosevelt is prepared to proceed in the next ten days with a series of reorganization orders effecting major consolidations and regroupings under his new reorganization authority, it was learned last night.

Reported under serious consideration was a plan to merge several independent lending agencies including Chairman Jesse H. Jones' Reconstruction Finance Corporation, under the Commerce Department. This shift, if it is ordered, is expected to embrace such agencies as the Home Owners Loan Corporation and the Federal Housing Administration.

Public Works Consolidation

Also under study was a plan to group all public works functions under a single head. This proposal embodies many of the objectives of the Byrnes bill for consolidating Federal public works agencies, and is expected to be delayed pending Senate action on the latter measure.

Still other shifts said to be receiving careful study include a proposal to group all bureaus engaged in welfare and relief under a single agency, and others to transfer the Bureau of Fisheries and the Biological Survey of the Agriculture Department, and the Coast and Geodetic Survey of the Commerce Department to the Department of the Interior.

Must Act Swiftly

Under his reorganization powers, the President must move swiftly if any bureau mergers are to take place this year. Plans submitted by the White House cannot become law until they have been before Congress for 60 days, and then only if neither House votes to "veto" an order. And adjournment before expiration of the 60 days automatically would force the plans over until next session.

Chairman Jones declined comment on the proposed lending agency merger, which informed members of Congress said has been recently discussed at the White House. Budget Bureau and Commerce Department spokesmen denied knowledge of the plan.

Friends of the RFC chairman predicted sharp Congressional opposition if such a plan actually is transmitted to the Capitol. They pointed to Jones' RFC record of more than $7,000,000,000 in loans with collections of about 74 per cent, as against Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins' WPA record for spending.

Byrnes To Act

Meanwhile, Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, moved quickly to call up Public works consolidation bill in the Senate today following word that a reorganization plan was contemplated embracing many of the same objectives.

Byrnes is understood to have contended that permanent legislation, such as his bill provides, is necessary to bring about any practical

Cleric Jailed; Admits Affairs With 20 in Flock

By the Associated Press.

Tiffin, Ohio, April 19.—A red-haired pastor who confessed immoral relations with 20 girls and women in his congregation was sent to Ohio Penitentiary today for 1 to 15 years.

The Rev. Colson Owens, 41, pleaded guilty to attempting familiarities in 1937 with a 14-year-old, since married. Indictments charging him with adulterous relations with three women and obtaining $800 under false pretenses from a fourth were held in abeyance.

Deputy Sheriff George Steinmetz said the pastor, father of five children, signed a confession to illicit relations with a score of his parishioners, naming 14.

Nearly 30 men, some of them husbands of the women named in Owens' statement, were in the courtroom.

Help Cement Americas, D.A.R. Urged

Common Ideals Are Necessary, State Department Cultural Chief Says

Political and economic factors alone cannot hold the Americas together, but must be supplemented by common ideals and sentiments—which almost always determine a nation's course in the end—a State Department official yesterday told Daughters of the American Revolution

Dr. Ben M. Cherrington, chief of the department's new division of cultural relations, urged the D. A. R. delegates to throw support of their society behind efforts to cement Pan American friendship and to take the lead in tying American history back to its common source—Columbus.

Holds Americas United

The Americas are united today, he said, in a "spirit of revolution against intolerance and tyranny," and it is to their "mutual interest that law and order and justice prevail in the world."

After speeches and reports that lasted into late afternoon, delegates attending the forty-eighth Continental Congress in Constitution Hall last night turned their attention to another social event, the assembly of State regents.

Today they will elect seven vice presidents general, adopt additional resolutions, and hear an address by Channing Pollock.

F. B. I. Praised

In resolutions adopted yesterday they asked Congress to authorize Government purchase of Decatur House, on Lafayette Square; expressed approval of movie houses which play "The Star-Spangled Banner" at each show, and praised the Federal Bureau of Investigation for "combating lawlessness."

Mrs. Marie Lomas Bockoven, chairman of press relations, reported that D. A. R.'s have had $1,400,000 worth of publicity in American newspapers during the past year. This was the estimate she placed on 2,000 "solid pages of printed matter and 6,000 pictures."

In preparation for the golden jubilee celebration, it was announced that an archives room costing $25,000 would be built this year in the basement of Continental Memorial Hall to house historical documents sent in by various chapters.

$25,000 Pledged

Taking the platform in a "surprise action," Mrs. Russel William Magna, honorary president general, secured pledges for the entire $25,000, which includes a $10,000 estimate for air-conditioning.

Dr. Luther H. Evans, national director of the historical records survey of the Works Progress Administration, addressed the congress yesterday on the work of that agency, receiving applause when he said its aim had been "to provide honest employment and not to develop a dole system."

Dr. Jean Stephenson, chairman of genealogical records, praised furtherance of D. A. R. research ideals made possible by WPA co-operation.

Italy Trades Cloth For $2,500,000 In Mexican Oil

By the United Press.

Mexico City, April 19.—Mexico and Italy today completed negotiations for a barter deal whereby this country will exchange $2,500,000 worth of oil for $2,000,000 worth of Italian rayon and $500,000 worth of machinery.

A new semi-official corporation, Importadora y Distribuidora de Artisela, will be created by this government to handle the Mexican end of the business, which will include resale of the rayon and machinery while the Italian end will be in the hands of Ital-Rayon.

Rayon imports under the agreement were expected to total 3,600,000 kilos (7,936,560 pounds) a year.

Italian tankers will begin the petroleum shipments June 1 and will carry about 30,000 tons of oil monthly. The rayon shipments from Italy to Mexico will start the same day.

23 Men Indicted In Dope Ring Cleanup

Kansas City, April 19 (AP).—Twenty-three men, accused of being members of a $1,000,000-a-month narcotics ring, were indicted today by a Federal grand jury now investigating crime and political corruption in Kansas City.

The 23 were arrested when Federal Treasury agents smashed the ring here last week.

Secret Service Agent Hurt in Train Leap

Martinsburg, W. Va., April 19 (AP).—Physicians said today Leo H. Mooney, a secret service agent injured on a passenger train, would be able to continue his trip within a few days. Dr. T. K. Britain's Gesture

By the Associated Press.

London, April 19.—Britain offered a "no encirclement" pledge to Reichsfuehrer Hitler tonight as the cabinet stepped up its drive for more arms and allies.

Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax, discussing the "cry of encirclement" raised by Germany and Italy against the French-British antiaggression front, declared:

"I would be prepared at any time to give a most solemn undertaking on the authority of the government that no such idea would ever find a place in British policy."

Lord Halifax said negotiations with Soviet Russia for an air pact were being actively pursued and he hoped "recognition of different points of view" would permit the "progress that we all desire."

It was reported reliably that, as part of the armaments speed-up, Prime Minister Chamberlain had agreed to set up a department of supply to equip the expanding British army. A new cabinet post may be created for it, and announcement is expected this week.

"Excluding No One"

Lord Halifax made another conciliatory gesture in saying that Sir Nevile Henderson, Ambassador to Berlin, would return to his post when his period of leave was ended. He did not specify a date. Sir Nevile came home March 17 after Germany took Czecho-Slovakia.

The foreign secretary declared Britain's purpose, rather than encirclement, was "a comprehensive system against aggression, excluding no one who will come in with us" and was without regard for "the internal political organization of any country."

He praised the Roosevelt appeal to Italy and Germany for a ten-year peace agreement and expressed confidence that millions everywhere "trust that his initiative may have a successful outcome."

The government asked local authorities to push civil defense measures ahead of other business for three months, and arrangements were made for bakers to store more flour to meet wartime requirements.

Turkish Pact Reported

A clearer indication of Russian policy in the defensive program was expected after Ivan Maisky, Russian Ambassador to London, makes his report in Moscow Friday.

Foreign office officials said Anglo-Turkish talks were proceeding. There was belief in political circles that agreement already had been reached, but that no formal announcement would be made.

British experts are urging Poland and Rumania to enter into immediate staff talks. They concluded a defensive agreement in 1931.

American Ambassador Kennedy gave a luncheon today for leaders of all British opposition parties.

Britain is endeavoring to remove the feeling that Rumania now is almost entirely dependent on Germany for her supplies of war material.

It was reported that Rumanian Foreign Minister Cafencu would

True to Axis, Says Hungary; Raps U. S. Bid

Polish Envoys Join Fascist Nations' Conference in Rome

By the Associated Press.

Rome, April 19.—Representatives of Italy, Germany, Hungary and Poland joined in round-robin conferences tonight to discuss policies of the Rome-Berlin axis.

The extraordinary diplomatic activity was believed by foreign observers to presage a counter-offensive against the French-British alliance which the axis nations consider an attempt at "encirclement."

Hungary, through her foreign minister, Count Stephen Csaky, already had declared herself "faithful" to the axis in consultations which began yesterday during the visit of Csaky and Hungarian Premier Count Teleky.

Duce Confers Two Hours

Today's round robin started with a call by German Ambassador Von Mackensen on Teleky and Csaky.

The Hungarians later were closeted for two hours with Premier Mussolini and his foreign minister, Count Ciano.

Closing talks were between the Polish Ambassador, Boleslao Wieniawa Dlugoszowski, and Teleky at the Hungarian legation. Exceptional importance was attached to the Polish-Hungarian talks since Poland is one of three continental powers to which Britain and France have pledged aid to defend their independence. Greece and Rumania are the others.

Aid Offered to Neighbors

[Poland was reported to have decided to extend armaments aid and military co-operation to Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, said a United Press dispatch from Warsaw.

[It was understood, however, that Poland would not undertake to guarantee the frontiers of her Baltic neighbors.—Editor's note.]

Britain's Ambassador, the Earl of Perth, also talked with Ciano. British sources suggested his was merely a farewell visit since Perth is retiring Monday, but other quarters

Rumania on Fence

By International News Service.

London, April 19.—Reichsfuehrer Hitler, in a sensational maneuver to attack directly the very basis of President Roosevelt's peace message to himself and Italian Premier Mussolini, has addressed officially certain Balkan states asking whether they feel threatened by Germany, it was learned tonight.

The Nazi Fuehrer, apparently seeking material for a blunt negative reply to Roosevelt's message of last Saturday, mentioned the President by name in his inquiries to the Balkan countries. Hitler then asked:

Do you feel yourself threatened by Germany?

Did you know in advance that Mr. Roosevelt was planning to dispatch his message to Europe's capitals, and particularly to Berlin and Rome?

Prepares Counter-Blast

Whatever answers Hitler has received or will receive are virtually certain to be revealed April 28, when the Reichstag will meet to hear his reply to the President's plea for a guarantee of from 10 to 25 years of peace.

Hitler, it was learned, is preparing a counter-blast to the Roosevelt message, claiming that many smaller European states—on whose behalf the President chose to speak as champion of their independence—never were threatened by Germany and are not even worried over Germany's intentions.

Rumania Reported "Neutral"

By the United Press.

Berlin, April 19.—A discordant note was struck tonight at the start of a gala holiday celebrating Reichsfuehrer Hitler's fiftieth birthday when it was reported that Rumania had firmly rejected Nazi efforts to bring her solidly into the orbit of the Rome-Berlin axis.

Rumanian Foreign Minister Gafencu, in Berlin for consultations with Hitler and Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop, was understood to have insisted that Rumania is determined "in all possible circumstances" to maintain absolute neutrality.

Gafencu, who will go from Berlin to London and Paris after witnessing a display of Germany's armed strength tomorrow in celebration of Hitler's birthday, was said to have explained that the military pledges given to Rumania by Britain and France do not constitute Rumanian hostility toward the Reich.

Talks to Continue

It was understood he agreed to continue trade talks aimed at bringing German-Rumanian trade relations even closer than provided under the March 26 accord which gave Germany a strong economic foothold in the Danube basin.

Propaganda Minister Goebbels tonight eulogized Hitler as a "his-

U. S. Reports Crucial Shortage Of Freight Cars in Germany

The Commerce Department yesterday announced that a transportation crisis" had developed in Germany due to a shortage of rolling stock on German railways—a condition that normally would deter any nation from plunging precipitately into war.

Due to the shortage, estimated at 90,000 freight cars, "in addition to much needed engines and passenger car equipment," Nazi sales of rail equipment to Latin America may be sharply curtailed, the acting American commercial attache to Berlin reported.

This may interfere with barter agreements with Latin-American countries. The situation makes it questionable whether the Reich will be able to fulfill an arrangement with Argentina to trade 64 Diesel engines, 900 steel freight cars and 30 sleeping cars for 100,000 metric tons of wheat and 8,000 metric tons of wool. The agreement runs for six months, except that the wool may be delivered at the beginning of next year.

Owing to the unpredictable nature of the Nazi situation, authorities here were unwilling to venture an opinion whether the transportation problem would cause Germany to avoid war. However, they said

HITLER AT FIFTY

That flabby, sinister little man, Adolf Hitler, is 50 years old today, a triumph of bad oratory, prevarication and other people's cowardice—a man frightened into becoming a dictator. He was on his way to become a Socialist—had not two brawny workmen threatened to throw him off a Vienna building scaffold because he hesitated to join a labor union.

Schoene Adolf
. . . pretender/

He began his political career as a spy and informer at labor meetings . . . Now, some Americans who admire success too much are in danger of admiring Hitler.

* * * *

Hitler's snarl of complexes began with his hatred for his father, an illegitimate cobbler . . . His bitterness was aggravated by his failures at painting and architecture . . . He never earned more than $9 a week in his life . . . Probably he has never been alone with a woman . . . Since his boyhood he has never known any Jews . . . He hates them because Jewish students excelled him at art and architecture.

* * * *

He also hates priests (whom he calls "black moles"), intellectuals and capitalists. Despite his success at oratory, he despises Senators and other legislators, whom he calls "ganders." He also despises the masses, whom he calls gullible sheep and boobs.

He insists that his propaganda must be in simple words, so it will delude the least educated.

"—he was scared on a scaffold"

Most of Hitler's lies were uttered either in writing or in public, before microphones and thousands of listeners . . . They have succeeded because backed by guns and bombs . . . There exists in Washington a list of 300 Hitler lies . . . Before each land grab he has publicly promised no more land grabs. He likes to pretend a Napoleonic grasp of military strategy.

* * * *

Hitler financed the beginnings of his Nazi Party with French bribes . . . He promised to commit suicide if his Munich putsch failed. It failed, but he didn't commit suicide . . . An Austrian, he became a German citizen by trickery . . . Americans who have met him say he is a male Aimee Semple McPherson . . .

In his 1934 blood purge he assassinated a friend at whose wedding he had been best man six weeks earlier . . .

After the purge he suffered a hysterical breakdown for 13 days.

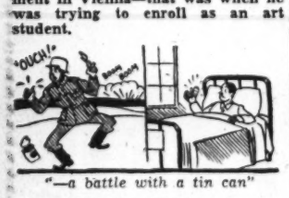
Under Hitler 1,100 Germans have been beheaded, 400 shot "escaping," 750 have committed "suicide" in prison, 120,000 are in concentration camps and more than 4,500 have just "disappeared" . . . He is fond of chocolate and cream puffs . . . Not Hitler but Goering is the only top Nazi who looks Nordic.

Hitler privately expresses contempt for the sheepish submissiveness of the Germans, and realizes that the ones who have emigrated to America in the last century.

* * * *

Der Fuehrer has lied about his war record as well as about his "student days" in Vienna . . . He claims that as a small boy he was already an orator and leader, though neighbors say he was a puny mamma's boy . . . In "Mein Kampf" he modestly implies that at 20 he was the keenest student of government in Vienna—that was when he was trying to enroll as an art student.



"—a battle with a tin can"

Despite his doctored war record, the story is current in Germany that he suffered his most serious wound by cutting his thumb on a tin can of bully beef; his hospital mates vouch for that . . . When police fired on his ruffians in Munich in 1923 he dropped unhit to the cobbles so fast that he broke his arm . . . In "Mein Kampf" he refers to the German people as cattle. Has he helped them? Some 60,000,000 Germans live worse than our WPA families. A skilled mechanic earning $15 a week pays $4.40 to the Nazis; a clerk earning $85 a month pays the Nazis $16.25.

* * * *

Hitler's fantasies include everything from a "United States of Europe," with Germany in the dominant role, down to an empire in which hordes of non-Aryans—Slavs, Moslems, Africans, Italians—will be the slaves of Germany . . . He supports actively the propaganda of his psuedo-scientists that only Germans are A-1 human beings; other nationalities are missing links to him.

* * * *

Like other liars and tyrants, Hitler has his good points. He can be amiable on occasion; he likes music and makes some pretensions to manners and culture; he has a sort of perverted sympathy for the "cattle" he oppresses . . . But he is irrational on German "superiority;" he cannot be believed, and his latest peace shrieks may merely mean he schemes to celebrate his fiftieth birthday by pushing the swastika—maybe to the shores of the Mediterranean.

To us Americans he is a lesson in the danger of listening to too much bad oratory, as the Germans did.

Long Proposes Cash Neutrality To Avoid War

Concedes Such a Plan Would Benefit Japan And Great Britain

By the Associated Press.

Conceding that the "cash and carry" neutrality plan would work, theoretically at least, to the advantage of Japan, Breckinridge Long, former diplomat, nevertheless recommended such a system yesterday as a means of keeping out of war.

Testifying in the Senate Foreign Relations Committee's hearings on proposed changes in the neutrality act, he strongly objected to proposals calling for an embargo on aggressor nations or even upon all belligerents in a foreign war. He called them dangerous.

A better plan, he said would be to allow all foreign belligerents to purchase American raw materials, arms, ammunition and other products, but with the stipulation that they pay cash and furnish ships for the transportation of their purchases.

Theoretical Alliances

Senator Johnson (Republican), California, asked whether such a plan would not, in effect, make the United States an ally of Japan in the Pacific and Great Britain in the Atlantic. He explained he meant that the superior naval strength of these nations would prevent their wartime enemies from buying here. Such, theoretically, could be the result, Long said, adding:

"I'm thinking of what is best for the United States—what will keep this country out of war and that is why I am supporting the cash and carry proposition."

While Long, former Ambassador to Italy, was expounding his views before the Senate committee, the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, conducting a similar study, heard a succession of witnesses:

Benjamin C. Marsh, executive secretary of the People's Lobby, said the threatened conflict in Europe was "between entrenched aggressors, Britain and France, which have stolen a large part of the habitable area of the world, . . . and nations which want to do likewise." He opposed giving discretionary power to the President to deal with problems of neutrality.

Action Sought Against Japan

Maxwell S. Stewart, of New York, recommended that an embargo be placed against nations which break their treaties. He asked that the neutrality act be revised to permit such action against Japan. Congressional approval of such a policy now would "do more to prevent a war in Europe than anything that could be done," he said.

Alfred M. Bingham, editor of Common Sense Magazine, said neutrality legislation was needed to keep the country from being "dragged into war." The United States, he added, should not now so identify itself with Great Britain and France "that we become joint defenders of the status quo." There was, he said, "too much wrong with the status quo" for America to throw its economic weight against any attempt to change it.

Committee Seeks To Stay Retiring Of Naval Officers

Holding that, under present world conditions every qualified officer should be retained in active service, the House Naval Affairs Committee has acted to forestall the scheduled retirement of 150 naval officers this June.

The committee has written into a minor naval personnel bill which it will report to the House today, a proviso suspending operation of a Navy retirement law for the next five years. Several hundred officers, it is estimated, will be retained on the active list, including about 150 who are already under orders to retire June 30.

This action was taken after naval officials testified there was a serious shortage of officers for the expanding fleet. The Navy Department, however, opposed the move on the ground that young lieutenants are needed rather than the commanders and captains who would be held on duty.

Works Merger Bill Slated for Senate Test

measure are amendments to the social security laws, which would advance the date of old-age benefits to 1940, liberalize payments and establish a new class of relief recipients known as "handicapped" individuals.

Both bills were reported favorably at a meeting of the special committee yesterday, after Byrnes, in a last-minute move, dropped from the social security sections a provision designed to increase old-age benefit payments in the Northern States.

Byrnes said that one reason the Democratic committee members voted down this provision, which had been offered by Senator Lodge (Republican), of Massachusetts, was that Chairman Altmeyer of the Social Security Board had stated it would upset the board's calculations.

Will Go to House

Although the public works bill is expected to pass the Senate without great difficulty, it will almost certainly not be enacted for some weeks at least. Once through the Senate, it will be referred to the House Appropriations Committee, which at present is conducting an investigation into the WPA.

Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, acting chairman of the inquiry, said yesterday that the Byrnes bill, along with various other measures for altering the Federal relief structure, would be considered several weeks hence, when some conclusions can be drawn from the current WPA investigation.

Byrnes said he would bring up his bill liberalizing the social security laws next week, when the Senate is finished with the public works bill. The two measures were split largely because members of the House Ways and Means Committee protested against social security proposals arising in the Senate, and Byrnes did not wish to endanger the entire program because of House insistence on its own prerogatives.

Pepper to Offer Plan

It was suggested in some quarters that for this very reason the Byrnes social security bill could be considered as "dead" until after the House brings forth its own amendments to the present law.

Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, said yesterday that when amendments to the social security law were brought out on the floor of the Senate he intended to offer his program embodying the Townsend plan for monthly pensions to the aged.

Meanwhile, his colleague, Senator Andrews (Democrat), of Florida, yesterday introduced a bill to call conventions for amending the Constitution to insure legality of taxation that would be necessitated if the Townsend plan were adopted.

Figures Cheer Harrington

Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA administrator, announced yesterday that 37,404 persons had been dropped from relief rolls because they were not in need.

"It is gratifying," he said, "to learn that only 1.3 per cent of more than 2,900,000 cases reviewed were found to have been carried on our rolls longer than was justified by conditions which caused local authorities to certify them for WPA jobs."

The percentage dropped from District relief rolls was 1.3, exactly the national average. Of 11,559 workers employed here between February 15 and March 15, 145 were removed from the rolls as being not in need. The number in Maryland was 309, or 2 per cent, and in Virginia, 225, or 0.8 per cent.

Hebrew Father And Son Banquet To Be Melting Pot

The head table at the father and son banquet to be given Sunday night at the Hotel Mayflower by the Washington Hebrew Congregation Brotherhood will be a veritable melting pot, it was disclosed yesterday.

Sidney Lust, general chairman, announced that guests will include a Catholic priest, a Protestant minister, a rabbi, a member of Congress, baseball and football players, managing editors of the Capital's newspapers, movie magnates, college coaches, sports writers and radio announcers.

He declined to say whether the following, to be seated at the table, would be charged with the responsibility of keeping order: J. Edgar Hoover, chief of G-men; Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, and George Moriarty, the American League baseball umpire.

14th and F Named Capital's Suicide Corner

Pedestrian

the pedestrian is starting to cross the motorists' path and make it to the Press Club. The danger is, of course, that there will be a tie.

If the pedestrian waits (although he has no way of knowing that he ought to wait), there will come a moment when he will not have to buck the cross traffic.

Pedestrians crossing Fourteenth street at this point are, in a sense, always jaywalking. When it is time to cross, say, from Liggett's corner to Garfinckel's corner, two green lights show on the latter corner. One says to go "thru." The other tells motorists and street car motormen to turn right into Fourteenth, so that the pedestrian who is crossing at the same time has to be a veritable adagio dancer.

That there have been no serious accidents is a tribute to the skill of H. H. Hartman and A. B. Cidwell, veteran traffic policeman at the corner.

Hartman pointed out that he has authority only to stop pedestrians from crossing on the red light. If a pedestrian chooses to cross when both green signals flash, Hartman, pointing to a street car, admitted:

"There's nothing I can do except hope I am close enough to pull you out from under one of those things."

District traffic experts, according to Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, are "studying" how walk lights now in use at other intersections may best be installed at Fourteenth and F. He said there were at least five other downtown intersections where the movement of traffic was handled in precisely the same way, but the travel "load" at Fourteenth and F made it the city's toughest downtown traffic problem.

Van Duzer said he expected walk lights would be installed sometime after July 1 when the new District appropriation will make funds available.

President Set To Put Merger Act in Effect

Offices

regrouping of works functions, pointing out that no reorganization plan could extend the life of a merged agency beyond the statutory expiration date.

While the Byrnes bill would combine WPA, PWA and other construction functions, the consolidation would include such additional relief agencies as the National Youth Administration and the Civilian Conservation Corps.

The plan reported under consideration by the Administration is understood to provide principally for merger of PWA with such agencies having public works functions as the Bureau of Public Roads of the Agriculture Department and the public works' portion of the Treasury Department's Procurement Division.

Relief functions would be continued as a separate arm, if this course is followed, with WPA relief activities combined under a single head with welfare functions now distributed through various departments. Lending credence to reports of a separate relief merger order was the President's indication Tuesday that he will ask $1,500,000,000 for WPA for the next fiscal year.

Pepper to Discuss School Legislation

Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, will discuss legislation for extending education to children who are physically handicapped, in a parents' night program at 8:15 p. m. Monday in the North Interior Building auditorium. The meeting has been arranged as part of the WPA home instruction program, beng sponsored by the Board of Education and the Health Department.

Other speakers will be Mrs. Mary Steele and Dr. Ella Oppenheimer. Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, chairman of the Board of Education, will preside.

Murphy Tells Aides to Guard Civil Rights

Urges U. S. Attorneys To Enforce Statutes Without Favor

Attorney General Frank Murphy yesterday told United States attorneys gathered here from all parts of the country to enforce the civil rights statutes, "not just for some of the people but for all of them."

He said the new civil liberties unit had been set up in the Justice Department "because we believe there has been no time in our history when the protection of civil liberties was more important than it is today.

Democracy Under Fire

"The vicious cycle of depression and mass insecurity has brought the usual demands for repression of minorities," he declared. "Meanwhile, those who deny that liberty is an essential of human happiness are ridiculing democracy as unworkable. We must show them how wrong they are. One of the best ways to do that is to make civil liberty a reality for every one in our midst, no matter how humble or how great."

The civil rights statutes until recently "have been practically a dead letter," he said.

Murphy frankly told the attorneys that the condition of civil dockets was not satisfactory. He said there was in some districts "an unhealthy delay" in disposing of war risk insurance cases, while in others forfeited bail bond cases were not being handled "with sufficient energy."

Seeks Salary Increases

Declaring the general level of salaries of United States attorneys was too low, he said he would seek funds to raise those found to be too low.

The conference, designed to aid in bringing about a "united front" against crime, is the first Nationwide gathering of United States attorneys ever held.

Connecticut Gets Time to Ratify The Bill of Rights

Connecticut has finally ratified the Bill of Rights to the American Constitution.

The first ten amendments that Patrick Henry, George Mason and James Madison insisted upon to make a man's house his fort and castle were formally accepted by Connecticut yesterday after 150 years. It was a gesture in honor of the 150th anniversary of the Constitution.

It seems that in 1791, the Connecticut Legislature adopted the ten amendments and they went through the Connecticut Senate. But before the finishing legal touches were applied word arrived by horse, carriage or carrier pigeon that nine of the 13 States had ratified the amendments and Connecticut's assent was unnecessary.

So the matter was halted there.

Henry du Pont Disputes Owing U. S. $214,545

Henry F. duPont of Winterthur, Dela., disputed yesterday a contention that he owed $214,545 income and surtaxes for 1934, 1935 and 1936.

He said in a petition filed with the board of tax appeals that the Commissioner of Internal Revenue erred in assessing him for income from trusts he established for his wife, two daughters and others.

On Capitol Hill

Minton Succeeds J. Ham Lewis As Democratic Whip in Senate

Senate Democrats yesterday elected Senator Minton (Democrat), of Indiana, as party whip. He succeeds the late Senator James Hamilton Lewis (Democrat), of Illinois. Minton had served as assistant whip under Lewis.

MINTON

The Indiana Senator was a luncheon guest of President Roosevelt yesterday at the White House.

He said the visit was "purely social" and there was no discussion of a boom started in Indiana Congressional circles for appointment of Val Nolan, United States district attorney for southern Indiana, to a vacancy on the District of Columbia Court of Appeals.

Philadelphia, April 19 (AP).—Representative Frank Bateman Keefe, of Oshkosh, Wis., finds "you need a sense of humor in Congress"

"I consider myself an expert on banking," he told a luncheon club today, "so they put me on the merchant marine committee. The merchant marine in Wisconsin is like the Swiss navy."

Senator Reed (Republican), of Kansas, member of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, yesterday introduced a joint resolution authorizing railroads to establish an agency to "pool" their less-than-carload freight traffic. The measure also provides that after January 1, 1940, it shall be mandatory for railroads to handle such freight through the proposed agency.

Under a joint resolution approved by the Senate Commerce Committee, August 19 of each year would be set aside as national aviation day.

President Roosevelt asked Congress to make available for the balance of the current fiscal year $12,000,000 for grants to States for administration of unemployment compensation laws under the social security act.

Grants already made this year for State administrative purposes total $49,000,000.

Many States have exhausted their funds and administrative forces in a few States face a layoff.

Senator Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, predicted general tax revision at this session as a business stimulant. President Roosevelt told reporters on Tuesday he would resume tax discussions in a week or ten days with Harrison and Chairman Doughton (Democrat), North Carolina, of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Senator Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, withdrew his request that the Senate recall and amend a bill it passed to limit the political activities of Federal employes. He said he would try to have amendments made in the House.

Guffey told the Senate on Monday he was "in thorough sympathy with the aims and objects of the bill" but did not think it went sufficiently far.

Wallace Stands Pat on Subsidies For Farm Exports

By the Associated Press.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace indicated yesterday that the Administration was standing pat, in the face of strong opposition, on its proposals to reduce farm surpluses by paying bounties to encourage exports.

He told a press conference "a compromise" solution to the cotton surplus problem was expected to be formulated within a few weeks.

"I don't see how such a solution could meet objectives of President Roosevelt, in maintaining farm income and in economizing on Governmental outlay, without use of an export subsidy," Wallace said.

He said the Administration proposed to export fully 100,000,000 bushels of surplus wheat during the coming marketing season. In order to place a like amount of wheat into foreign markets this season, the Government paid an export bounty averaging about 26 cents a bushel on about 77,000,000 bushels.

What's The Score, Brother?

WHY START out for an afternoon's fun at the ballyard with two strikes on you?

Wise fans who enjoy seeing their heroes warming up get there in plenty of time so they can grab the seats they like best and be cool and comfortable when the affray begins.

They don't come running up to the gate from land knows where, all hot and bothered, wiggle through the turnstile in a temper and ask a neighbor as they scramble for seats way out near the fence:

"What's the score, brother?"

The wise boys—and girls too—make it a point to ride street cars and buses to Griffith Stadium when the Nats are playing at home. They know that cars of Routes 70, 72 and 74, Georgia Avenue-7th Street and of Routes 90, 92 U Street pass directly by the Park and that free transfers make it easy to ride conveniently between any part of town and the Stadium.

They welcome the chance that riding street cars and buses gives them of saving on a few afternoon's transportation enough to pay for a ticket to another game.

Employers Favor A.F.L., Madden Says

Senators Hear NLRB Chief; Hearings Delayed On Inquiry Proposal

Chairman J. Warren Madden of the National Labor Relations Board told a Senate committee yesterday he believed employers generally prefer to deal with the American Federation of Labor.

"If you took a vote of all employers you probably would find a strong preference for the A. F. of L." Madden told the Senate Labor committee on cross-examination.

"But regardless, the law says the employer has no right to drive his employes into a union of his own choosing."

Madden Defends Act

Madden resumed his defense of the Wagner labor relations act, and its administration, as the House Rules committee postponed until next Monday hearings on the Anderson resolution, proposing sweeping House inquiry into the NLRB.

Madden will be invited to testify before the House group at that time. Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, a ranking member of the group, said he wished to examine Madden before the committee votes on the inquiry. He said Edwin S. Smith, another member of the board, later will be asked to appear.

Support for a proposal by Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, to create an entirely new labor relations board, comprising five members representative of different regions of the country, as well as labor, employer and public interests, meantime came from Chairman Mary Norton of the House Labor Committee.

Mrs. Norton said she believed the act itself needed little amending and that the Ramspeck proposal would meet criticisms aimed at the present board.

Definite date for House Labor Committee hearings on proposed Wagner act changes will be fixed Monday, following disposition of pending wage-hour law amendments, Mrs. Norton said. She declared her committee was "not going to be sledgehammered" into precipitate action on the Wagner act by rules committee investigation proposals.

Madden's Senate committee testimony that employers prefer A. F. of L. bargaining units to rival C. I. O. unions came during a round of questions on Labor Board contract cancellations on grounds of collusion between employer and union.

Opposes Employer Talks

Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, declared 15 A. F. of L. contracts had been set aside against one C. I. O. contract, on collusion grounds. Madden said this was due to apparent preference for A. F. of L. among employers.

Opposing a proposed A. F. of L. amendment giving emloyers the right to talk to their workers, Madden told the committee a statement by an executive to one of his employes might often be found a violation of the act.

He said that under certain circumstances, an employer's expression, even if truthful, might be considered coercive. For example, Madden said that allegations that a union leader was a Communist, even if correct, might have a coercive effect by making clear that the employer did not wish the worker to join that union.

Madden immediately opened himself to fire by Holt, Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, and Senator Taft (Republican), of Ohio.

"The truth ought to be a defense," said Ellender, while Taft commented "it seems to me an utterly foolish and unsound method of interpreting a law of Congress."

Madden said he supposed that "ten times out of ten, the employer makes these statements for the very purpose of keeping his employes from joining the union. What else is he making them for?"

Victim of a hit-run driver, Willis W. Grist, 51, of 3031 Douglas street northwest, died yesterday at Mount Alto. He was the District's twenty-ninth traffic victim for 1939, as against 27 this time last year. Grist was struck in the 1500 block Benning road northeast January 14. He suffered a broken leg and arm.

Meanwhile, Lionel W. Hodges, 33, of 1507 M street northwest, a mail truck driver, was acquitted yesterday by a Police Court jury of a negligent homicide charge in the traffic death of Miss Ella Martin, 66, of 2301 Thirty-ninth street northwest.

Miss Martin died at Emergency Hospital April 1. She was injured March 26.

Ohio River Flood Recedes; 6 Dead

Cincinnati, April 19 (AP).—Relief measures were relaxed in Ohio River communities tonight as the stream receded along its upper length, crested at Portsmouth and Cincinnati and rolled sluggishly west.

Lambert Hehl, chairman of the Red Cross disaster committee at Newport, Ky., said "the emergency is over."

Two more deaths in Kentucky brought the total for the flood to at least six throughout the valley.

Letters Refute Doping, Stinson Jury Is Told

Letters written by Mrs. Lola Pepita Crounse Stinson in perfect handwriting, describing intricate financial decisions in "remarkable detail," give "damning" refutation of the claim that the 54-year-old poetess and socialite married Joseph Whitla Stinson under the influence of drugs, it was asserted yesterday in closing arguments before Justice Luhring.

Former Representative Beedy, chief counsel for Stinson, said the letters were written by the wealthy widow during the period when, according to her testimony in the annulment suit, "she couldn't even hold a pen in her hand."

"No one taking four or five tumblers full of those drugs every day could have written such a precise account of negotiations more than 25 years ago," he declared. "The contention that she was drugged is the very heart of Mrs. Stinson's testimony—when that is knocked down, what's left of her case?"

Beedy will conclude his argument when the court resumes hearings at 10 a. m. today.

Auto Club Will Protest To Alexandria

Keystone Group Hears Motorists Are Deprived of Neckties

Motorists arrested in Alexandria for minor traffic violations have been confined to cells, searched and deprived of their neckties and belts while awaiting bond for their release, the Keystone Automobile Club was told last night.

Acting on reports from Manager George E. Keneipp, the advisory board of the club decided to protest to the Alexandria authorities against these and other alleged indignities. The board planned to furnish legal defense for a member said to have been "dragged from his home" on a warrant after being told by police he need not answer the minor charge preferred against him.

D. C. "Leniency" Assailed

Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, assailed the leniency with which, he said, drunken drivers are treated under District laws. He urged that driving while under the evident influence of liquor be made a felony. Nichols, who is a member of the House subcommittee on District taxation, told the club of a proposed 2 per cent gross tax on parking lots.

Acceptance by some downtown parking lots of more cars than they have space for on busy nights was attacked by Nichols. In such cases the extra cars are often moved into the streets and parked double, he declared, rendering them liable to parking tickets and damaged fenders.

Meters Praised

Representative Collins (Democrat), of Mississippi, outlining Congress' plans for improving Washington highways. Praising the parking meters, he predicted expansion, and estimated a $100,000 annual revenue from them.

The board urged that the city's playgrounds be opened on Saturdays during the summer to keep children out of danger from traffic. Support for a petition to Congress to that effect will be sought from all citizens' associations.

The board also indorsed the House bill to widen Wisconsin avenue from R street to Mount Alto Hospital.

Jailed Man Dies Of Skull Fracture

Police last night opened an investigation into the death of Clifton Moore, 35, colored, of 3850 Dennison place northwest, who succumbed at Gallinger Hospital yesterday.

Moore was found unconscious in the roadway at Reno road and Yuma street northwest Monday morning, and was taken to Emergency Hospital. Later, police reported, Moore was transferred to the Third Precinct Station as a drunk case.

Still unconscious after several hours in jail, police said, Moore was taken to Gallinger Hospital. An autopsy disclosed a fractured skull, suffered, according to the coroner's report, "from a blow, a fall, or an automobile."

Air Authority Chief's Son Does Odd Jobs for Flying Lessons

Robert Hinckley, jr., 21-year-old son of the chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Authoriy, is learning to fly and it isn't costing his father a cent.

Young Hinckley is earning his way at Congressional Airport by painting and repairing planes, overhauling engines, working on the terminal's road and other odd jobs, Manager Arthur C. Hyde said yesterday.

Several weeks ago, Hyde asked young Hinckley why he didn't take flying lessons. After some hesitation, he replied that he certainly wanted to learn, but didn't "want to ask for the money."

Wasn't there some work he could do at the airport to pay his way? Hinckley wanted to know.

Since he's been there, doing everything there is to do around an airport, he has been "getting the kind of flying training you can't buy with money," Hyde said.

"He's seeing a lot of flying, learning to operate the controls and finding out how planes are put together by working on them," Hyde explained.

"So far as learning to fly is concerned," Hyde continued, "Bob is just one of more than a hundred pupils at the field."

"We're mighty fond of him," he declared, "and he certainly gets a lot of work done."

510 Million Army Bill To Be Reported

Senate Votes Air Bases Chain; House Will Speed Action

President Roosevelt's emergency defense program neared final Congressional action yesterday as approval was given to three major national defense measures.

Senate and House conferees on the Army appropriation bill reached final agreement on disputed provisions of the measure and prepared to report back expenditures totaling about $510,000,000 for support of the Army next year, a record for peace time. The bill carries $50,000,000 for launching the air-expansion program under which the Army will have close to 6,000 first-line planes by 1941.

Naval Air Bases Approved

After but 16 minutes' debate, the Senate unanimously passed legislation authorizing a chain of naval air bases in Alaska, Puerto Rico, the Pacific islands and the United States proper. The $68,800,000 measure, which goes back to the House for action on amendments, provides for the naval phases of the President's special defense plan.

The last phase of that plan to be launched in Congress, the civilian pilot training bill, was approved by House and sent to the Senate. It authorizes flight training for 15,000 youths next year and 20,000 the following four years, as a back-log of national defense.

After the Senate had acted on the naval base bill, Chairman Vinson of the House Naval Affairs Committee said he would ask the House today to accept the Senate amendments and thus speed passage of the measure. The House committee recently approved the two additions made in the Senate, for a $17,000,000 air base at Jacksonville, Fla., and $1,000,000 for land for a projected base at Quonset Point, R. I.

Naval officials hope to obtain funds for starting the 15 proposed new air bases in the regular Navy appropriation bill, which will be brought before the House in the next week or two. Not included in the bill is $5,000,000 proposed by the Navy for developing the tiny Pacific island of Guam as a seaplane base. Officials hope to provide additional harbor facilities for the island, only 1,400 miles from Japan, in a separate measure.

Included in the bill are major bases at San Juan, Puerto Rico and Kodiak, Alaska; secondary bases at Kaneohe Bay, Hawaii; Sitka, Alaska, and Tongue Point, Oreg., and patrol plane bases at Midway, Wake, Johnston, Palmyra, outlying Pacific islands. The measure also provides for expansion of existing facilities at Pensacola, Fla.; Pearl Harbor, Hawaii; Norfolk, Va., and Philadelphia.

6 Million to Retool Arsenals

Under the agreement reached by the Army appropriation bill conferees, $6,000,000 will be allowed for retooling arsenals to enable the armament program to go forward without delay. The House delegation also agreed to Senate amendments providing for the development of Albrook Field as the major Army air base in Panama, increasing the number of flight surgeons and modernizing 40 field guns.

The Senate, however, receded on a proposal to establish 54 new R. O. T. C. units, although securing House consent to increasing the number of students in R. O. T. C. senior classes to 18,000. An increase of 50 medical officers and 25 dental officers was allowed but a larger officer expansion in the line was dropped. An even $1,000,000 was allowed for construction at National Guard camps, a compromise, while a Senate amendment providing $1,000,000 for aircraft research was dropped.

Awaiting enactment of the bill are orders for some 500 new war planes. They will be let as soon as the $50,000,000 fund for new planes becomes available.

In passing the Lea civilian aircraft training bill, the House tacked on an amendment forbidding aliens from receiving instruction. The proviso also stipulated that no person should be barred from training on the ground of color, creed or race, and that at least 5 per cent of those given training by the Civil Aeronautics Authority shall be other than college graduates.

it obviously is a marked weakness in the Nazi plan of offense or defense.

Other developments bearing on Germany were:

The German embassy denied reports from Argentina that the Nazi government had undertaken to bring about the separation of Patagonia and Argentina. These reports, the embassy declared, are based in particular on a "spurious document" published in the Argentine press purporting to be a report of German embassy and Nazi Party officials in Buenos Aires.

The Treasury ordered an immediate investigation of allegations by American wood pulp producers that Germany was dumping wood pulp in this country. Pending the outcome of the inquiry, customs officials were directed to obtain special bonds on imports of German wood pulp to satisfy any extra tariff duties which may be assessed.

Nazi recognition of the critical transportation problem, the department declared, is reflected in an announcement in the controlled German press that the railway construction program will be given preferential treatment in all respects, even at the expense of other projects in the "four-year plan" of armament construction and economic preparation.

Loan Will Be Needed

Since the reserves and earnings of the Reichsbahn company, through which the Nazi government owns all German railways, is insufficient, it will be necessary to depend on the German capital market to finance a huge program for railway rehabilitation.

"The shortage of rolling stock in Germany," the department declared, "is reported to be so serious that the Reichsbahn has ordered 6,000 locomotives, 10,000 passenger cars, 112,000 freight cars and 17,300 motor trucks and trailers, to be constructed during the next four years. This equipment will have a total value of 3,500,000,000 marks.

"It is estimated that in the next four years the railways will have to go to the capital market for about 10,000,000,000 marks. The recent introduction of government financing by means of tax certificates and the announcement of the discontinuance of long-term conversion operations by the government are expected to facilitate the financing of the rehabilitation program."

Issuance of tax certificates, it is recalled, was resorted to after the German government had failed last fall in a long-term conversion bond offering. Some authorities regard the Nazi government as close to bankruptcy.

French Arms Guard Danzig, Bonnet Says

Denies Poland, Reich Are Negotiating; Would Fight Seizure

By the United Press.

Paris, April 19.—Foreign Minister Bonnet late today told the Chamber foreign affiars committee that any German attempt to take Danzig by force will result in immediate French armed aid to Poland.

Bonnet denied reports abroad that Poland and Germany were negotiating on Nazi claims against Danzig, supposedly under a plan whereby Warsaw would consent to giving Danzig the status of a "free German city."

The assurances of military aid which France and Britain have given to Poland, Rumania and Greece cover not only any resistance in defense of their political independence, but their territorial security as well, Bonnet said.

Alliances Tightening

Regarding report of a possible totalitarian coup against the Tangiers International Zone, adjoining French Morocco, Bonnet said, satisfactory assurances had been received from Spanish Nationalist Gen. Franco that no such aggressive action was contemplated, and that all Italian troops would be withdrawn from Spain soon.

[Bonnet also told the committee that the French government had "steadfast hope that the road opened" by President Roosevelt's telegrams to Hitler and Mussolini would "lead to peace," the Associated Press reported.

[He also told the deputies that French efforts to assure Soviet Russian aid to Poland, Rumania and Turkey in the event of war should soon "reach a rapid and satisfactory conclusion." He declared efforts to bring Poland and Rumania together also were "proceeding satisfactorily."—Editor's Note.]

Arms Ministry Considered

Premier Daladier studied a plan to put French rearmament and the stocking of war reserves under a central authority by adding a post of minister of armaments to his cabinet, similar to Prime Minister Chamberlain's reported decision to create a British ministry of supply.

France and Britain held staff consultations with Soviet Russia, Poland, Rumania, Greece and Turkey.

Chiang Desires Peace, Tokyo Says

Tokyo (Thursday), April 20 (U.P.). The newspaper Kokumin, which often reflects the views of the army, said today that Chiang Kai-shek "actually desires peace with Japan" and that the British Ambassador to China, Sir Archibald Clark-Kerr, has taken a mediation offer to Chungking which Chiang may accept.

The paper described as "bluff" a statement given out in Chungking Tuesday by Chiang in which he said that peace is not possible now.

straighten this out when he comes to London Saturday from Berlin. Britain has indicated a willingness to aid Rumania financially in purchasing arms.

Both Russia and Germany are keeping their eyes on the Aaland Islands which dominate the North Baltic. Finland and Sweden asked for permission to defend them three months ago, and this was granted by all powers except Russia and Germany. The German reply arrived today, and it was believed to have concurred with the majority.

Chamberain spoke briefly in Parliament today, saying only he had nothing new to report on defensive alliance negotiations and replying to a questioner that he wuold consider the "desirability" of including China and other Far Eastern governments.

Halifax told the Lords there was no need for concern over troop movements in Spain because the nationalist army was being demobilized and "a great deal of troop movement is legitimately and naturally to be accounted for by that fact."

The government has been making "fairly large" purchases of Argentine canned meat since last September for use if war breaks out, it was learned authoritatively (Argentine sources reported today that 10,000 tons above normal quotas of canned meat had been purchased from Argentina and Uruguay by Britain.)

It was believed unlikely the cabinet would alter its present view that conscription would be unwise at this stage, but it was believed the government would approve a system of compulsory physical training for youth.

Churchills Recall Rumored

Special Cable to The Post.

London, April 19.—Persistent reports are current that Winston Churchill, Britain's great and popular "elder statesman," will be drafted for non-administrative position in the Chamberlain government. In such a post he could serve as a sort of unofficial "defense minister," and as special expert adviser.

In addition, Prime Minister Chamberlain is said to be looking for a young, "strong man" to perform detailed duties as chief of a projected department of ministry of supply.

Meanwhile, other cabinet shifts are said to be under consideration. Lord Runciman, who has been ill, may be relieved of his post as lord president of the council. Reports are also current that Anthony Eden may be brought into the cabinet.

It is predicted that before the close of the week, Chamberlain will announce two or more cabinet changes.

The chorus of approval which Great Britain has hitherto given to the peace appeal of President Roosevelt was marred by a discordant note when Baron Ponsonby, former Labor government member, announced that he was "out of harmony" with the American demarche, since Roosevelt was unable to pose as an "impartial arbitrator."

"I find myself out of harmony with the recent message of the President of the United States," Baron Ponsonby said. "On the face of it, the message is a very eloquent exposition of the views of the opponents of the dictators, put forward with an honest desire to prevent war . . . But it cannot be claimed that the President of the United States is an impartial arbitrator . . .

"An affirmative reply by Hitler and Mussolini would seem to imply a confession of guilt in the past and nefarious designs for the future, while a negative reply must mean they have no intention of altering their course in the future.

"I have no doubt whatever about the President's good intentions, but I have very grave misgivings about his method: It appears too much like throwing down the challenge."

Copyright, 1939, by New York Tribune, Inc.

Britain's decision to send her Ambassador to Germany back to Berlin will not be followed immediately by a similar gesture from Washington, informed sources said last night.

The Administration will await Hitler's speech of response on April 28 to President Roosevelt's appeal for a peace pledge before taking any action with regard to returning Ambassador Wilson to Berlin.

Wilson was recalled to Washington last November for report and consultation.

Hurban to Meet Royalty as Czech Envoy

State Department Puts Minister of Extinct Country 23d in Line

By Edward T. Folliard

Alert cartographers already have erased Czecho-Slovakia from the European map. Nevertheless, when the invitations go out to members of the Diplomatic Corps here to meet King George VI and Queen Elizabeth at the White House on June 8, the State Department will make sure that one is forwarded to Col. Vladimir Hurban, the Czecho-Slovak Minister to the United States.

The State Department said so yesterday in answer to an inquiry. So far as the United States is concerned, it was explained, there has never been any change in the status of Col. Hurban, notwithstanding the fact that the Nazi swastika now flies over Bohemia and Moravia. Officially this Government holds that no "legal basis exists" for Germany's protectorate, since it sprung from "military aggression."

Backed by State Department

This is backed up by the State Department's April issue of the little, blue-covered "Diplomatic List," which went to press two weeks after Adolf Hitler annexed the war-born republic. On page 55 appears the following:

"CZECHO-SLOVAKIA. December 30, 1936. (Date of Hurban's arrival.)

"Mr. Vladimir Hurban, E. E. and M. P., 2349 Massachusetts avenue (telephone, Dupont 4621).

"Madame Hurban."

The visit of King George VI and Queen Elizabeth and the White House reception for the Diplomatic Corps shortly after their arrival will mark Col. Hurban's first appearance at an official social function.

As dean of the ambassadors, Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador, will head the parade of diplomats. Col. Hurban will be twenty-third in line among the ministers.

Still Holds Legation

Col. Hurban continues to occupy the Czecho-Slovak Legation on Massachusetts avenue, having refused the German Embassy's demand to surrender it. Funds to maintain it naturally have ceased to come from Europe, but hundreds of Czechs in the United States have offered to contribute money so that the legation can be continued as a "symbol."

Actually, it was pointed out yesterday, Col. Hurban does not have to hold on to the legation to maintain his status. He could live in a rooming house, and the United States would still regard him as the Czecho-Slovak Minister.

There has never been a case quite like that of Col. Hurban. Perhaps the nearest to it was the case of Boris Bakhmeteff, who came here as Russian Ambassador in July, 1917. Hardly had he arrived when the Kerensky government was overthrown. However, he remained as ambassador until April 28, 1922, when he wrote to Secretary of State Hughes to say he was retiring. During that period he received all the honors and perquisites due an ambassador, including "diplomatic immunity."

Normandie Under Heavy Guard After Warning; Fire That Wrecked Paris Called Sabotage

Associated Press RADIOPHOTO.

The 37,000-ton French liner Paris is shown as it turned on its side and sank in 36 feet of water at its berth at Le Harve after being swept by fire. Two persons were killed in the blaze, which damaged a $500,000 shipment of art treasures to the New York World Fair. Officials were investigating the theory of sabotage yesterday and a guard was ordered for the liner Normandie, in dock behind the Paris. Photo was radioed from London to New York, and to Washington by wire yesterday

By the United Press.

Le Havre, France, April 19.—The government tonight ordered a heavy increase of armed guards aboard the luxury liner Normandie after receiving warnings that the vessel would be destroyed in the same manner as the liner Paris, which burned and sank early today.

It was reported that a time bomb had been discovered aboard the Normandie, successor to the Paris as the flagship of the French Line.

Minister of Merchant Marine Louis de Chapdelaine announced that the Surete Nationale—France's Scotland Yard—had been warned in advance of a sabotage plot against the Normandie.

Instead, the 34,570-ton Paris was destroyed by fire in what the French press described as "a clear cut case of foreign sabotage." Two lives were lost.

Naval authorities pointed out that in event of war the Paris could have been converted into a troop transport, while the Normandie could be made into an aircraft carrier.

The Normandie, the longest passenger ship afloat, is less than 500 tons lighter than the Queen Mary.

The Paris was to have sailed for New York Thursday with an extensive passenger list and art treasures, valued at $460,000, destined for the New York World's Fair.

Sailors said the fire broke out in two widely separated parts of the ship. The first blaze was discovered in the ship's bakery. Fire-fighting crews had barely been organized before another fire was discovered in the barber shop, two decks above.

Of the art treasures aboard the Paris only one of ten cases was lost. Several hundred thousand dollars in gold bullion bound for New York and jewels valued at more than $1,375,000 were saved.

Ten American airplanes also were saved. They had not been unloaded, although the Paris was due to sail today.

War Officials Oppose Plan to Bar Bergdoll

Committee Indorses Bill to Deny Entry To Draft Dodger

By the Associated Press.

A Congressional committee acted swiftly yesterday in an effort to prevent Grover Cleveland Bergdoll from returning to the United States from his self-imposed exile in Germany, but encountered immediate opposition from the War Department.

The House Military Committee tentatively approved legislation to bar the projected homecoming of the World War draft dodger, but later received an unfavorable report on the measure from Secretary Woodring.

Chairman May (Democrat), of Kentucky, said that in view of the opposition, he would defer final action on the bill until Tuesday when brief public hearings would be held. May predicted both his committee and the House would give prompt approval to the measure, which would prevent re-entry into the United States of any person who deserts from the Nation's armed forces in time of war and then flees the country to evade punishment.

The State Department, in a brief letter to the committee, said it had no objection to the legislation.

Without mentioning Bergdoll's name, Secretary Woodring wrote that the legislation "would tend to defeat the accomplishment of military justice by erecting an effective bar against the fulfilment in such cases of the punishment of persons who have deserted from the military forces."

Bergdoll was convicted by court-martial of desertion and sentenced to imprisonment for five years.

Representative Harness (Republican), of Indiana, author of the bill, said he understood Bergdoll was planning to leave Germany for the United States in a week or ten days.

torical superman" in a radio broadcast.

Goebbels whipped the people to anger by describing Hitler as the one man who had defeated the western democracies in their efforts to "build conflagration centers around Germany which they could ignite at will in order to keep Germany in check."

The birthday celebration started at 7 p. m., when Nazi Party leaders led by Rudolf Hess, deputy chief of the party, congratulated Hitler in the enormous mosaic hall of the new chancellery.

Hitler's old comrades of the 1923 Munich putsch and veteran Nazis holding Hitler's medal for those wounded in the early Nazi struggles also extended greetings.

Meanwhile, tens of thousands of factory workers led by brass bands marched through gaily decorated streets and took up places along the route over which Hitler rode at 9 p. m. to dedicate Berlin's new "east-west axis" thoroughfare.

The new thoroughfare was turned into a triumphal avenue, lined by imitation marble pillars topped by illuminated golden eagles.

The chief feature of the celebration will come tomorrow when nearly 40,000 troops in steel helmets will goose-step past the Fuehrer in the greatest spectacle of armed might ever staged in the Third Reich.

Goebbels, in his broadcast, declared Hitler's name "goes around the world like a legend."

Of the western powers, Giebbels said:

"We regard their hysterical shrieks with sovereign contempt, and this contempt is shared by the German people."

Praising Hitler as the protector of European peace, Goebbels said:

"The name of Hitler is a political program. No one can regard his name indifferently. The highest a man can reach is that he engraves his personality on an era and gives an epoch his name.

"The present world cannot be conceived without him.

"Men make history and Adolf Hitler has given the history not only of Germany but also of Europe a new direction."

Yugoslavia Courted

Budapest, April 19 (AP).—Diplomatic observers saw increasing evidence tonight of a campaign by the Rome-Berlin axis to draw Yugoslavia into the anti-Comintern Pact.

Yugoslavia could thus assuage the axis powers without undue difficulty, it was pointed out, since she never has recognized the government of Soviet Russia.

Col. Lindbergh Takes Up Duty An Hour Late

Aviator Reports To Air Corps Chief And Gets Office

His every movement blanketed by official silence, America's most famous airman went to work for the Army yesterday.

Called in active service to help build up aviation research facilities in this country, Col. Charles Lindbergh reported for duty in the Munitions Building at 10 a. m.—more than an hour late.

While reporters, photographers and newsreelmen watched for the tall, slim figure of the colonel, he managed to slip into Air Corps headquarters unobserved. For several hours, officials would not confirm his presence, but later a spokesman said he had reported to Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of Air Corps, and taken over his new duties.

After a conference with Gen. Arnold and other Air Corps officials, the 37-year-old colonel was given an office opposite Arnold's. He was given keys to the chamber, the trophy room of the Air Corps, and locked himself in and began work.

Today, he will report at Air Corps headquarters in the morning, but at 2 p. m. will attend the semi-annual meeting of the National Advisory Council for Aeronautics.

Piloting an Army airplane, the colonel is expected to visit most of the 30-odd aircraft research centers in the next few weeks.

said his visit concerned "current matters."

The British government has been represented as impatient over the withdrawal of Italian troops from Spain until after a final parade of Fascist legionnaires through Madrid which has been postponed from May 2 to May 15.

Italian press attacks on President Roosevelt for his peace plea to Mussolini and Reichsfuehrer Hitler continued with attempts to poke fun at him.

Exactly when or how any formal Italian reply might be given remained uncertain. Some Fascist sources thought Mussolini might refer to the President's message in a broadcast tomorrow at 11 a. m. (5 a. m. E. S. T.).

Csaky dismissed Roosevelt's week-end appeal as an "unwelcomed surprise" and "new American interference with the affairs of central Europe."

Hungary was one of 31 nations on whose behalf Mr. Roosevelt asked nonaggression pledges from Hitler and Mussolini. Csaky's statement was given to the official Italian news agency and was prominently published in Italian newspapers.

While Hungary for some time has been within the orbit of the Rome-Berlin axis and the rejection of the American President's proposal occasioned little surprise, it caused diplomats new concern over the immediate future in central Europe.

Some professed to think that Hungary's increasing solidarity with the axis partners meant that Hungary might be an instrument of the axis in some new thrust.

The Hungarian ministers are due to leave Rome for Berlin tomorrow. They are to be followed to Italy by Yugoslav and Rumanian foreign ministers.

Hungary absorbed parts of Czecho-Slovakia and now centers her territorial claims on western Rumania and northern Yugoslavia, parts of the former Austro-Hungarian empire.

Some Rome diplomats believed that a Hungarian-Yugoslav nonaggression pact was one object of the negotiations here. This opinion was strengthened by the fact that Ciano is to confer at Venice Saturday with the Yugoslav foreign minister.

Such a pact would draw Yugoslavia closer to the Rome-Berlin axis and deal a final blow to what remains of the Little Entente (which was composed of Czecho-Slovakia, Rumania and Yugoslavia).

(Britain and France have pledged their aid to preserve Rumania's independence.)

"All Hungarians . . . remember every moment of their lives the unfortunate 14 points (of President Wilson)," said Osaky.

"They do not forget that the Treaty of the Trianon (which fixed Hungary's diminished post-war boundaries) was the result of the 14 points, because there is no one who does not see that the effects of the precarious peace established on that base still continue to poison day by day the lives of individuals and relations among peoples.

"Wilson's interference is too recent and its results too tragic for us not to feel in our bones a sense of resentment for what has happened . . . as a result of the Trianon Treaty."

Filipino Chiefs See Delay in Trade Preference Pact

Filipino officials yesterday expressed the opinion that Congress would not enact this year the measure to continue preferential trade relations between the United States and the islands for 15 years after the Philippines attain political independence in 1946.

They made the assertion after a telephone conversation with President Quezon in Manila. Quezon had planned to come to the United States in June, but these officials said it was unlikely now that he would.

They said they informed Quezon the Senate Territories Committee's action yesterday delaying action on the Philippine bill was motivated by the world international situation.

Chamberlain's Policy Vindicated, Says Howard

New York, April 19 (AP).—Roy W. Howard, editor of the New York World-Telegram, today returned from Europe with the expressed conviction that Premier Chamberlain's appeasement policy "now is beginning to vindicate itself."

The people of England are supporting the views Chamberlain held last September at the Munich conference, he said, and as a result of Chamberlain's stand war, if it comes, "will come at a time when England and France choose and not when Mr. Hitler wants it."

U. S. Guarding Against Famine In Any War

Research Seeking New Foods and Uses For Farm Products

It would take more than a war to give the United States as a nation the experience of going hungry, it was revealed at the Department of Agriculture yesterday. A number of bureaus are at work there now doing reserach that may help America to use up her foodstuffs, and there is no limit to the additional food and food-products that could be produced in case of necessity.

Research is being made to discover nonfood uses for food, such as the use of soy bean oil derivatives in paints and varnishes, and the hydrogenated oil in plasics.

As for augmenting the range and volume of the country's food supply, it was stated, the tendency is in the other direction. Development of one sort of food means displacement of another, and there is an oversupply, or potential oversupply, of all the existing staples.

Studies Under Way

Among studies under way at present, either in Washington or in cooperative stations throughout the States, are uses for Southern sweet potato starch, in food and nonfood industries; use of the soy beans, conducted at Urbana, Ill.; the extension of the frozen pack method in the laboratories at Seattle, Wash., and the extension of the use of all kinds of fruit juice and pulp. In the last respect, the frozen pack method has been applied to pulp of fruits on the West Coast with considerable success.

Peas, corn, lima beans, string beans, broccoli, asparagus, and some cauliflower have been subjected to the frozen pack process, with the practical effect of extending the use of each crop. And either by one method or the other immensely increased quantities of juice are now available, covering a range of fruits and berries that includes apples, limes, the papaya, pineapple, strawberry, cherry, raspberry, youngberry, boysenberry (the last two familiar on the West Coast), the loganberry and others.

Secondary Sources

Earlier efforts to popularize reindeer steak have been abandoned, it was explained yesterday. There didn't seem any point in it when cattle were so plentiful.

For the same reason efforts to popularize or make avaliable some of the more exotic foods, do not interest the department at present. In this category are avocadoes, kingsnake meat, cats, goldfish, wild mushrooms.

That famine is many times removed from the population in either war or peace, was indicated by the fact that even should existing surpluses be used up, there are secondary sources of food. It was pointed out, for example, that on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, "marsh rabbits," which are muskrats, have been used for food.

Funds Sought to Make Latin-American Friends

President Roosevelt requested an appropriation of $316,330 for the promotion of "closer and more effective relations" between the United States and other American republics in a letter to Congress Tuesday.

The money would enable the State Department to create a new bureau to promote cultural relations with Latin American countries, fellowships for exchange of students and distribution of American publications in Spanish, French and Portuguese.

Russian Paper Praises Allies And Roosevelt

First Friendly Words For Britain, France In Long Time Printed

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, April 19.—Indications of a more friendly attitude in Moscow toward British-French foreign policy were seen today in the editorial of a high-placed journal which also warmly praised President Roosevelt's nonaggression appeal to Germany and Italy.

Le Journal de Moscou, a French language publication which frequently speaks the attitude of the foreign office, even conceded that recent British-French moves—guarantees against aggression by the Rome-Berlin axis—were steps in the right direction.

The editorial contained the first kind words published in Moscow about Prime Minister Chamberlain and Premier Daladier since long before last September's crisis over Czecho-Slovakia.

Others pointed out that this editorial, coming yesterday after four days of extreme reserve in the Soviet Press, certainly looked more like British-Soviet co-operation than anything seen here for months.

"The U. S. S. R., powerful and peaceful, always has worked for consolidation of peace. She always has pronounced herself for a clear and precise position on the most important international problems," the editorial said.

Benes Forecasts End Of Europe's Dictatorships

By the Associated Press.

Boston, April 19.—Asserting that Europe's dictatorial regimes had passed "their culmination point," Eduard Benes, former president of Czecho-Slovakia, said tonight inevitable reaction to those governments would end in an ultimate triumph for democratic principles.

The man who has seen his country taken over by Nazi Germany told the Massachusetts League of Women Voters in a prepared address that:

Fundamental Law

"Here and there, there may be another democratic collapse, but on the whole, the period of new reaction of democracy against the authoritarian regimes of Europe does now approach.

"That is the fundamental law of every revolution. Democracy after the (World) War was a great revolution; the reaction came after its mistakes and failures. The dictatorships are today another great revolution; their mistakes, failures and inefficiency provoke inevitably new reaction."

Forced to Retreat

Benes said that "politically, morally, economically and socially these (authoritarian) regimes have passed today their culmination point and the only section of their policy which continues to give them new force and power is their successes in international policy and in general European and world power policy."

He contrasted the attitude of the democracies now and previously when, he said, "the democracies, very often black-mailed, exaggeratedly fearing and not courageously enough facing the danger, were systematically forced to retreat and to accept the capitulation."

"That was the case," he said, "in the conflicts about Manchuria and China, Abyssinia, the occupation of Austria, the civil war in Spain and finally the German-Czecho-Slovak conflict in September and October, 1938."

Next President Won't Repeat, Says Al Smith

'Man Who Cleans Up' Needn't Expect 2d Term, He Declares

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 19.—Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith said today "the man who goes into the Presidency in 1940 has got to go in without thinking of a second term or he won't do any good."

"Because the man who cleans up the mess," he added, "is going to make himself so damn unpopular he'll be like a Gillette at a barbers' convention.

The Democratic Presidential nominee of 1928 spoke only briefly of national politics at a press conference he called to give a "solemn warning" against a New York State legislator's proposal to change the State's budget system.

He said the proposal was made on the plea an "emergency" existed and added:

"That's how Roosevelt got all his power in Washington—on the theory of emergency. The funny part is the emergency never ceases. They're not emergencies anyway, just new conditions."

He referred to 1940 when he was asked about a published report that he had conferred with others concerning a move to support a "conservative Democrat" in the next Presidential campaign.

"No such thing happened," he replied.

Asked if he had given any thought to the next campaign, he answered "No," hesitated a moment and then continued:

"I'm bewildered by it. But I don't see any use changing (parties) unless it can improve conditions."

"I don't see anyone in the Republican Party you can throw your hat up in the air about," he added.

"How about Dewey (District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey)?" he was asked.

"That goes for everybody."

"How about the Democrats?"

"I don't know," Smith replied.

Hopis Fight To Keep Evil Village Buried

generations had guarded the site of Awoviti, was given the green light.

Peter Navumsu, chairman of the tribal council, he who wore the jaunty red ribbon about his raven tresses, listened carefully. So did Sam Shingoitewa, wearing a green hair ribbon, a dweller in Moencopi village; and Fred Lomyesva, of Kykotsmovi village. Seth Wilson, the superintendent at the reservation, and responsible for the welfare of the 2,850 Hopis who live on the three 4,000 feet high mesas, listened no less intently.

"A certain chief told the expedition that we wouldn't give them permission for two reasons," Adams began. "First, they had given their word that they would not hire anyone for the excavation without consulting us. This they did not do. Second, workmen went to our ceremonials and got drunk and caused trouble.

"Those were the two reasons he gave," Adams said with dignity. "But there are other things that lie pretty deep.

"There were certain conditions when Awoviti was destroyed," said Adams. "The other villages got together and decided to destroy it because evil things were done there. There was no decency. It was agreed that it should never be touched again afterward. If any of the villagers were left, and they went back there, they would go insane.

"This was in 1690, ten years after the rebellion against the Spanish—when they drove out conquistadores and the priests."

Wilson recalled that the institute has already dug down to a level that dates to about the year 1000. "They found a large church in ruins, over a Kiva, or ceremonial place of the Hopis," he added.

"'What good does it do to dig there?' the villages want to know," protested Adams. "If it were on some other mesa, where no one was living, we might feel differently. But we are still alive. Our civilization is not dead. They are digging up our ancestors and they are touching things we have said shall not be touched."

reported by Mrs. Frank B. Whitlock, radio committee chairman, who said the programs "835 hours on the air."

Work on the National Historical Magazine, publication of the society, was outlined by Mrs. Victor Abbot Binford, magazine chairman, and by Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, the editor.

Mrs. Keyes said she had "no apology to offer" for the cost of the publication, for which an enlarged program was begun shortly more than a year ago when she took office.

Mrs. Ober D. Warthen, chairman of conservation, noted an increase of national interest in protection of resources and announced the beginning of several memorial forests by D. A. R. chapters.

Mrs. Henry Bourne Joy, chairman of the Real Daughters committee, reported that two real daughters were still alive—Mrs. Annie Knight Gregory, of Pennsylvania, and Mrs. Caroline P. Randall, of Vermont.

Women who have been nominated for the post of vice president general and from whom seven will be elected today are: Mrs. Homer Fergus Sloan, of Arkansas; Mrs. Robert J. Johnston, of Iowa; Mrs. Frederick Palmer Latimer, of Connecticut; Mrs. David J. Peffers, of Illinois; Mrs. Arthur John Rahn, of Montana; Mrs. John Logan Marshall, of South Carolina; Mrs. Henry Clay Chiles, of Missouri, and Mrs. Carl Hoskins, of New Hampshire.

In his speech Dr. Cherrington declared that none of the Americas was self-sufficient in resources and declared if any one tried to shut itself off from the others "regimentation of business within its borders" would follow. The United States, he said, is most self-contained when it comes to raw materials.

He learned the fact that Americas do not know "the literature of each other," urged the establishment of more scholarships and the writing of popular histories which would bring out the bonds which tie the Americas together.

Capra Begins Work on New Film of Washington

Shows Cast Local Picture to Establish Mood; Roadside Theater to Open With Melodrama; Brief Jottings of Current Amusements

A CONSIDERABLE NUMBER of Hollywood stars visited Washington a few days ago. They did it vicariously and by remote control.

That is to say that Frank Capra began work last week on his next production for Columbia Pictures and, instead of beginning with a script reading, showed his cast a motion picture of the City of Washington. The picture consisted of 5,000 feet of film made here last fall when Capra was a visitor in the Capital, accompanied by his chief scenarist, Sidney Buchman. He screened it for his cast because he was anxious for them to see Washington and catch something of the mood and tempo of the Capital of the Nation.

BELL

The screening was attended by the trio who will have the principal roles in "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," a sequel to "Mr. Deeds"—otherwise named because Gary Cooper was not available for the title role. The trio consisted of Jean Arthur, James Stewart and Edward Arnold, the same triumvirate that had so much to do with the success of Capra's picturization of the Kaufman-Hart Pulitzer Prize play, "You Can't Take it With You," which ran true to form and preserved the traditions by winning the Academy Award as the best picture of the past year.

Other players present included Guy Kibbee, Claude Rains, Eugene Pallette, Ruth Donnelly and Beulah Bondi. Several of these needed no refreshment of memory as to what Washington is like. Guy Kibbee was here at the Earle, for a week of personal appearances not such a great while ago; Claude Rains supplanted Earl Larimore in the role of Wang-Lung in the Theater Guild production of "The Good Earth," starring Nazimova, who now is appearing on the same stage in "The Mother," and our old home-towner, Beulah Bondi, knows this city almost as well as she knows our native Valparaiso, Ind.

Incidentally, this Frank Capra fellow is an inveterate picture-shooter-atter. He has had a camera crew in town for days now, taking further background shots for a film play which, no doubt, he hopes will win him another Academy award, just like "It Happened One Night," "Mr. Deeds," and "You Can't Take it With You."

I wouldn't be surprised.

It would be an astonishing revelation to many Washingtonians to know just how closely they were tabbed by Mr. Capra and Mr. Buchman when they were here months ago. They haunted the night spots, the halls of Congress, the cocktail lounges of the swankiest of the hotels, entertained unsuspecting guests at all sorts of functions and otherwise acquired a considerable first-hand knowledge of the "feel" of Washington. It will be interesting to note how much of this comes out on the screen when "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" finally is released. That should be some time along in the fall. Whenever it is, it will be seen on the screen at the Earle Theater, through the connivance of Zone Manager John J. Payette, of the Warner interests in this territory, and that high-strung Southern gentleman, Sam Galanty, Eastern manager for Columbia.

Weather man to the contrary, notwithstanding, this must be spring. If it isn't, what is this Roadside Theater announcement doing on my desk?

The Roadside, it seems, will present seven productions this year out in the "old red barn" on the Rockville pike, each to run two weeks—as has been the custom for the past five years. Not only that, but the management tonight will hold another tryout for membership in the acting company. This ceremony will be celebrated in room 201 of the School of Government, George Washington University, Twenty-first and G streets. The hour is 7:30.

The first offering of the Roadside's new season, opening on June 12, will be "The Pioneer's Daughter, or Perils of the Prairie," a riproaring, rootin', tootin' melodrama of the Old West. Indians, desperadoes, innocent heroines, stalwart heroes and all of the other concomitants of the "wild and woolly" are said to be combined in this one.

I can hardly wait!

Ralph Fowler will direct the plays at the Roadside Theater during its summer season of 1939. Anton Hardt, formerly director of the Roadsiders' efforts, is engaged in artistic pursuits of one sort or another at the New York World's Fair and finds it impossible to return to the Capital to resume his accustomed duties at the old red barn. He has an eminently competent successor in Mr. Fowler.

Dots and Dashes

The motion picture industry in Washington still is extending congratulations and warmest good wishes to Stanley Barlup, assistant manager of Loew's Palace Theater . . . Mr. Barlup had a birthday yesterday . . . Which one it was, he won't say . . . At any rate, everybody wishes him a million more . . . They don't come any better than Stanley . . . "Missouri Night" will be observed at the Earle Theater on Friday when Bob Burns opens his belated engagement on the screen in "I'm From Missouri" . . . The list of invited celebrities is too long for reproduction here and now, but will come along later—I hope . . . The Shoreham Hotel's Blue Room—unless I am treading on Mary Harris' toes—will break out its annual Ice Carnival on Monday, April 24 . . . What with the picture at the Capitol and everything, this is interesting—or should be . . . Rudy Berger, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer manager in Washington, wires that "The Hardys Ride High" is the best picture of the Hardy lot . . . That should be good enough . . . Bernie Kreisler, new Universal manager in Washington, is—or was—out at that convention of his company's in Cincinnati . . . He'd better get back, because he has a party on for next Monday . . . House-warming . . . Remember?

Makes Screen Debut at Columbia

CORINNE LUCHAIRE

the young French actress who plays the stellar role in "Prison Without Bars," the new Alexander Korda production, opening tomorrow on the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater. Mlle. Luchaire is the American cinema's latest importation from Paris

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., April 19.—Walter Futter has a grand idea. He's all ready to release Mack Sennett's "Tillie's Punctured Romance" with Marie Dressler and Charlie Chaplin. Now, if only Mack will accept that p. a. offer of $1,000 per week to tour with the picture and tell his story about how he found his stars and where, I predict the whole thing will be sensational. Everyone will like it except Charlie Chaplin.

HOPPER

With Martha Raye making so many pictures and p. a.'s, it would seem that Paramount should change the sign over the marquees of their theaters to "Pa Ray Mount" instead of Paramount.

Found Ty Power on the "Second Fiddle" set being fitted for Major Mafti's riding habit for his role in "The Rains Came." A costume design showed Ty in a turban and wearing a mustache. Ty doesn't know yet if he'll grow his own or paste it on. Wonder why they pay Ty $4,500 a week and cast him in parts totally unsuited to him? He's one of the best actors in Hollywood, a typical American boy. But at 24, he's played an Englishman, a Frenchman, an outlaw, a big gangster, and now—an Indian doctor. Why?

Fuzzy Knight, golfing at Lakeside with a sizable bet, was playing very bad. At long last, after slashing everything, he asked peevishly, "What am I doing?"

"You're losing your pants, sir," said his caddy.

If those skeet shooters don't look out, there'll be a new champion. Last week-end Dick Powell and Stu Erwin were nonplussed to have their records shot by band leader Jackie Cooper

Basil Rathbone, on location of "The Sun Never Sets," was practicing archery. Insists it isn't sporting unless you aim at a moving object. So had the prop boy throw paper plates in the air at which he aimed. But the climax came yesterday when the boy strolled off and came back a half-hour later with a gopher. Director Rowland Lee presented him with a tin medal for the first "gopher-in-one archer."

Who said musicals were dead? With Bing Crosby, Walter Damrosch, Al Newman and Linda Ware in "The Star Maker?"

The other night that society dame who goes to all premieres alone gave her chauffeur heck because he kept driving up to the entrance that wasn't floodlit. When she finally alighted the doorman said to him: "You've got to be nice to a dame like that. She may have a friend."

A marquee over a neighborhood theater read: "100 Men and a Girl" "She's No Lady."

Walter Brennan has served notice on Sam Goldwyn that he's going to accept the invitation from the Governor of Kentucky for the Derby—or else!

Irving Berlin has backed into fame again. Wrote a song for Kate Smith called "God Save America." Refused to publish it, didn't want to make money off a patriotic gesture. But so far 100,000 fans have demanded it, though it's still not for sale at music stores.

'Crisis' and 'Blackwell's Island' Combined On New Program at Metropolitan

Although only four reels long, "Crisis" is an exceptionally conclusive study of the months preceding the Munich pact. It opened yesterday on the screen of the Metropolitan Theater with "Blackwell's Island" as the lengthier feature.

Leif Ericson narrates the comments of Vincent Sheean. With much detail, the country and its frontiers are explored. The Czech character and the scenery of Central Europe are revealed in some beautiful camera shots and if the film lacks a certain suspense and tenseness, it is because so much care has been taken not to seem too biased. But the picture definitely does take a stand for the extinct nation and its natural shots are interesting.

It is one of the odd coincidences of the current theatrical week that at the National Theater, Mme. Alla Nazimova should be appearing on the stage in "The Mother," the last work from the pen of the late Karel Capek, which also purports to concern itself prophetically with the fate of Czecho-Slovakia. There is neither identification of country or characters in the stage play. "Crisis," on the Metropolitan screen, is by far the more conclusive exhibit of the two. This, probably, is the difference between imaginative fiction and documentation.

John Garfield again goes to prison in "Blackwell's Island," but he does it this time on his own recognizance. He is a brave, intrepid newspaper reporter, who wants to clean up the filth and muck of New York. His paper will not help him, but eventually he tracks down someone who will print his stories and he sets to work.

Blackwells Island is the old name for New York's Welfare Island and there is more than a grain of truth in this story. Although the opening titles call attention to its fictional nature, Joey Rao and his gang are not completely forgotten and if Hugh Herbert, as the gangster who has made a country club of a prison, seems like the creation of a screen playwright's imagination. Just remember that it all happened only five years ago. Although it is poorly pieced together as a film, it is a record of an actual case and the Earle patrons who saw it, in its earlier downtown run several weeks ago, found that to their liking.

Besides Garfield, Rosemary Lane, Dick Purcell, Victor Jory, Stanley Fields, Anthony Averill and Peggy Shannon are in the cast.

Actor Is Fall Guy For Picture Props

Granville Bates loves his work as an actor. He would make his home inside a Hollywood motion picture studio if he could. But he doesn't want to play a part in another horse picture. They cost him money.

Cast for a featured role in "Gantry, the Great," the picture featuring Elmer Gantry, the 15-year-old blind steeple jumper, Bates found himself hemmed in by horses of every sort and color. Early sequences of the film were made at the famous Janss ranch where Top Row, Special Agent, Boxthorn and other famous steeds are stabled.

Bates couldn't resist. He bought three expensive horses during the course of the production, costing him almost twice as much as he was paid for playing in the picture.

Burns in Debut

Bob Burns, now starring in "I'm From Missouri," made his professional debut as a guitar player at Van Buren, Ark., in Frank McClain's Van Buren Queen City Silvertone Cornet Band.

Maurice Evans, In Two Plays, Tops New Week

Full-Length 'Hamlet' And 'Henry IV' Billed; Other New Programs

MAURICE EVANS will bring his highly praised, full-length "Hamlet," as well as his production of "Henry IV," Part I, to the National Theater next week. The uncut "Hamlet" will be given Monday through Friday evenings, and Mr. Evans will play Falstaff at both the Saturday matinee and evening performance. Because of its length, "Hamlet" will begin promptly at 7 on each of its five evenings, with the final curtain falling at 11:15, and at 1 on Wednesday afternoon, with a 5:15 curtain. Mr. Evans' "Hamlet" has won high critical esteem, not only for his performance, but for the freshness resulting from playing the drama as a play and not merely as a character study. His Falstaff in "Henry IV," Part I, has likewise been received with acclaim. The casts of both the Shakespearian dramas remain intact and include Mady Christians, Katherine Locke, Henry Edwards, Whitford Kane, Wesley Addy and Edmond O'Brien. Margaret Webster and David Folkes, who performed similar services in last season's "Richard II," are, respectively, in charge of the direction and settings.

Palace

"WUTHERING HEIGHTS." The Emily Bronte novel of frustration on the Yorkshire moors comes to the screen under the Samuel Goldwyn banner with Laurence Oliver and Merle Oberon in the central roles of Heathcliff and Cathie. William Wyler directed the story of the tragic, gypsy-boy, who grew up at the happy Grange, but, upon the death of his protector, became its stable-boy under Cathie's tyrannical brother. Flora Robson, David Niven, Donald Crisp and Geraldine Fitzgerald are in the supporting cast. Opens this morning.

Earle

"I'M FROM MISSOURI." Bob Burns, as a Missouri mule dealer, invades Mayfair to convince the Government that mules are what its Army needs. In The Post's paragrapher's supporting cast are Gladys George, Gene Lockhart, George P. Huntley, Judith Barrett and Patricia Morison. Vincent Lopez brings his "Suave Swing Orchestra" and his own piano music to the Earle stage, where he will have as coheadliners, Patricia Ellis, the blonde screen star, and Abbott and Costello, noted for their comedy skits with radio's Kate Smith. Also with Lopez's Orchestra will be Betty Hutton, Danny Drayson, Nick Pisani and Dick Whalon. Opens tomorrow.

Capitol

"LET FREEDOM RING." Against the background of railroad-building in the West, just after the Civil War, Nelson Eddy plays a Harvard law school graduate, home in time to see his town and his father, played by Lionel Barrymore, terrorized by the robber-baron tactics of Edward Arnold and his henchman, Victor McLaglen. Charles Butterworth, Virginia Bruce, Guy Kibbee and H. B. Warner also are featured. Arthur Godfrey brings his own revue to the Capital stage with visting and local personalities. Ames and Arno, comedians; Wally and Vernon Stapleton, dancers; Katherine Westfield and her marrionette show; Mary Russell, radio songstress; Johnny Salb and Dee Clements will be in the line-up. Opens tomorrow.

RKO-Keith's

"THREE SMART GIRLS GROW UP." Deanna Durbin continues in this sequel to her first film of two years ago, "Three Smart Girls." This time, "Penny" is concerned with getting a boy-friend for one of her sisters. Charles Winninger, Nan Gray, Helen Parrish, Robert Cummings and William Lundigan are also in the cast. The "March of Time's" issue on Japan and Walt Disney's "The Ugly Duckling," are also held over.

Columbia

"PRISON WITHOUT BARS." Alexander Korda's English version of the well-liked French film concerns a girls' reformatory on the outskirts of Paris. Corinne Luchaire, who was in the Gallic version, plays her original role of the young girl, whom the new superintendent helps to freedom and, eventually, her own fiance. Edna Best returns as the superintendent Barry Barnes is the doctor-fiance and Marry Morris, Lorraine Clewes and Sally Wisher are others in Margaret Kennedy's screen-play. Opens tomorrow.

Belasco

"KREUTZER SONATA." The brief Tolstoy novel of guilty conscience, with a background of Beethoven's Kreutzer Sonata music, has been made into a French film in which Jean Yonnel and Gaby Morley play the central characters. Two days only at the Lafayette Square cinema, Saturday and Sunday.

Glen Echo

THE AMUSEMENT PARK is entering its second week with the coaster dips, the airplane swings, the whip, the dodgem rides and the world cruise luring the early spring crowds. In the ballroom, Herbie Holmes and his orchestra play for dancing each evening, except Sunday, from 9 until midnight.

Civic Theater

"THE TROJAN WOMEN." The Civic Theater repeats its production of Euripides' 2,300-year-old drama of war and women at the Wardman Park Theater. Director F. Cowles Strickland's company includes Elinor Cox Karsten, Harrison Libbey, Dorris McWhirt and Mimi Norton. Performances tonight, tomorrow and Saturday evenings.

Mount Vernon

OPEN-AIR AUTO THEATER—Spencer Tracy and William Boyd co-star in "Sky Devils" at the drive-in theater tonight through Saturday. Beginning next Sunday with the presentation of William Powell and Ginger Rogers in "Star of Midnight," because of the lengthening of the spring days, the first show will begin 15 minutes earlier than this week, at 7:30.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

By International News Service.

Hollywood, April 19.—Warden Lewis E. Lawes, who is as much of a hero in his world as any movie star is in Hollywood, has been handcuffed to a contract by Harry Cohn to act in as well as author "Men in Sing Sing" for Columbia. This, my friends, is a real coup for Harry, for Warden Hawes has turned down several offers to come to Hollywood in the past. Of course, it wouldn't seem natural for him to play any role other than a prison warden—which is exactly what he will do in his own movie.

LOUELLA PARSONS

With Lawes' vast knowledge of prison conditions, you can bank on it that "Men in Sing Sing" will be the most authentic prison movie ever made. So far the rest of the cast has not been set, because the warden will have a big hand in selecting the right prison types, in addition to his other jobs as actor, author and technical adviser.

Tony Martin and Brenda Frazier teamed in a musical to be made in New York is the hottest tip on my desk this morning. No, this isn't any wild rumor—but plans are all but closed for Alice Faye's big moment to sing love songs to the No. 1 debbie in a picture to be produced by Harold Orlob, who made "one-third of a Nation" with Sylvia Sidney. One particular reason Brenda might be interested in the deal is that her favorite boy friend, Billy Livingston, has already signed for a role in the film. In addition, she wouldn't have to come to Hollywood for her movie debut—for Brenda wants to remain in New York where her "glamour" background originated.

Interesting is the news that Al Rosen is making overtures to Bridget Hitler, a sister-in-law of the Nazi dictator, who is now in this country, to act as technical adviser on "The Mad Dog of Europe." Hitler's brother, 'tis said, is a bartender in Germany, and the report is that Bridget is on the outs with her in-laws. Rosen has been working on the idea of producing "The Mad Dog of Europe" for five years. When he first started, Hitler had not yet marched into Austria and Czecho-Slovakia nor tangled with Chamberlain, Daladier or Roosevelt, so the Hays office felt his idea was dynamite. Now, however, Rosen has been given permission to go ahead and he has Herman Mankiewicz and Lynn Root working on the screen play and Ralph Murphy ready to direct.

Chatter in Hollywood: The biggest under cover romance in Hollywood is Sonja Heine and Addison Randall. Ad took her to the Basil Rathbone party and never left her side. The next day he had to leave for location but he has telephoned her every night and has a date with her his very first eve back in town. The little Norwegian beauty, who has never really had a steady boy friend since she and Tyrone Power said adieu, is really interested in the handsome, Western hero whom the boys and girls see billed in the films as Jack Randall.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Richard Greene, who underwent a tonsillectomy last week, suffered a bad hemorrhage and is back in the hospital; Bob Ritchie took pretty Katherine Aldrich to the Milton Bren dinner for Ruth Mack; Arlenn Whelan is trying to make up her mind whether to wed Alex D'Arcy or remain a bachelor girl; Dorothy Reviere, now happily married to Charles Johnson, a local oil man, guest of honor at a party at the La Conga. She was once Columbia's top femme star; Tom Brown and his estranged bride, Natalie Draper, actually cooing at the Seven Seas; Binnie Barnes, twoing with James McKinley Bryant at the Tropics, was almost seated next to Jean Negulesco, once her big moment; Bert Lahr has bought four acres near Myrna Loy's Coldwater Canyon estate.

Chatting so confidentially at Victor Hugo's were Joe Pasternak and Louise Stanley; Georgie Jessel gets here Friday to spend a week-end with his bride, Norma Talmadge; Hope and Buddy Lighton celebrating 20 years of married life with a large cocktail party to their friends; the story that is going the rounds of a famous star who is cr-a-zy about a certain orchestra leader is the figment of his P. A.'s imagination. The lady doesn't even know the musician by sight; Bert Wheeler, now definitely separated from Sally Haines, at a spot with Paula Francis and Don Kerr; Kitty Kelly out of the Good Samaritan Hospital and back at work at Paramount; Jack Lewis (he owns half of Phoenix) in town with his wife for a vacation.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Little

"The more change, the less change," say the French, and in the twenty-month-old "Pearls of the Crown," which has finally arrived in our town at the Little, Sacha Guitry repeats the paradox in his inimitable fashion.

He tells the story of four pearls in the crown of England and ruminates upon the other three of the famous set of seven, which Pope Clement VII gave his niece, Catherine de Medici, on her marriage to the son of Francis I.

A rich and lusty taste for amours and intrigues flows unalterably through the four centuries of Mr. Guitry's imaginative tale. Guitry, his most recent wife, Delubac and a large French cast play the multitudinous roles.

With much flipping back and forth between English, French and Italian and from our time to the past, Guitry tells his story from a present-day triangle: A custodian of the English crown is telling the story of the pearls to his sovereign; a papal chamberlain relates it to the Pope and a French author spins the tale for his wife. The historical background is authentic enough for the four gems in the crown of today and the sly Guitry enlivens the true course of history with delectable asides. Pope Clement fusses and fumes when his nephew threatens to destroy his plans for Catherine de Medici by falling in love with her, but the Papal will ends by creating him a cardinal at 18. The pet stake of the slinky Abyssinian Queen is "embarrassing" to an Italian adventurer in search of a pearl! Titian paints his famous portrait of Francis I with a French coin as his model. Henry VIII, in London, boasts to his painter, Holbein, of the superiority of his legs over those of Francis I, who at that moment, in Paris, is telling Clouet that his legs are finer than Henry's.

In his purely hypothetical case for the three pearls, which disappeared after the death of Mary Stuart, Guitry strikes out for complete originality. We follow the career of one down through a deteriorating family line. An industrialist buys another at a Paris auction. Finally one of the historic pearls slips off its chain into the swirling Atlantic and, watching it slip gently into an oyster on the ocean bed, we realize we have been thoroughly intrigued by Guitry's refreshing imagination. New York, April 19.

SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR ICKES, who broadcast an attack against the columnists, will become a columnist next month—for Broun's Nutmeg . . . Margaret Gise, who will marry Walter Camp, jr. in May, was his secretary for 15 years—until 5 years ago . . . "Information, Please," the radio show, will become a movie short feature. The contracts were signed yesterday . . . The United States Attorney's office here has returned to Loretta Young all the letters they seized from Bill Buckner, who will be tried shortly . . . Sir Robert Peel, son of Beatrice Lillie, has had his visit to America cut short and will return to school in Switzerland on Friday. Bea doesn't want him to be spoiled by the Glamour-Boy publicity he's been getting. That's why she calls him "Brenda" Peel.

MAJOR BOWES and Dr. W. A. S. Rosenbach, the bibliophile, sat in a chair being rolled along the Atlantic City Boardwalk and stopped to buy some hot dogs . . . "Get a hot dog for yourself, too," they invited the chair pusher . . . "Thanks," he replied. "Hot dogs is my favorite food. I can eat 'em all day long" . . . "Is that so?" Dr. Rosenbach returned. "Then we'll get you some" . . . They stopped the chair at every hot dog stand along the route to purchase hot dogs for their grateful chair pusher . . . After a mile and a half the man collapsed. And so the alarmed Bowes and Rosenbach placed him into the chair and rolled him back along the boardwalk—to a hospital.

JACK KIRKLAND, the author of "I Must Love Someone," has a 200-acre farm and 20 registered Jersey cows—but his new baby must drink condensed milk . . . Julie Haydon flew to Hollywood the other day to be screen-tested for the new John Garfield picture . . . Phil Lord has told his sponsors that he never will portray the Seth Parker role again . . . Although the heads of other Federal departments are asking for wire-tapping equipment, Attorney General Frank Murphy is very much opposed to it and never will countenance its use . . .

ON APRIL 28, the day on which Hitler will address the Reichstag—and make his reply to President Roosevelt's peace plea—Warner Brothers will present "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" to American moviegoers . . . The producers of that film have negotiated with all the radio officials, proposing to buy one minute's radio time on all stations—the one minute immediately following Hitler's speech—and to use it to announce the new picture. No station, however, will permit it.

COUNTY JUDGE MARTIN, who has been indicted for bribery, won't be defended by the lawyers now representing him. He'll have other counsel . . . Stackpole Sons, who are being sued by Reynal & Hitchcock because of the unauthorized publication of "Mein Kampf," insist that if Reynal & Hitchcock win the suit, it will mean that Hitler will receive the royalties . . . Frank Fay's vaudeville venture is so successful that he's moving it to the larger St. James Theater. Aunt Jemima will join his revue . . . Magistrate Folwell, who recently sentenced Brooklyn College students for peddling their old school books, will not spend a very pleasant spring.

LAST WEEK 84 pieces of gold vases, idols, urns, etc., more than 2,000 years old, arrived on the Grace liner Santa Rita, headed for the Peruvian exhibit at the World's Fair . . . The entire collection, the only items saved from the Spanish Conquistadores, had been wrapped in cotton and arrived undamaged . . . But the customs men notified the Peruvian officials that, although the treasures had remained intact throughout the long voyage, the insurance companies would accept no liability for damage incurred during the short trip from the pier to the World's Fair grounds—unless the collection was wrapped in steel wool . . . And so Tuesday afternoon, in full view of unsuspecting waterfront paraders, the $1,500,000 Inca treasures were repacked by one man and his single guard.

Hear the Songs of the C. & O. Canalmen

Jess Swain has spent more than fifty years working on the old C. & O. Canal, both as a boatman and a lock-keeper. He is one of the few remaining authorities on Washington's only native folk tradition. Jess will bring his bugle and repertory of songs to Constitution Hall for the three-day National Folk Festival which starts April 27th. He will sing and play the songs that have been the favorites of boatmen ever since the first boat went through the locks.

More than 16,000 persons attended last year's Festival and present ticket sales indicate that many more will see this year's show. If you haven't bought your tickets, come down to The Post Building and get them today. They're going fast.

At Fifty

Fifty is an age at which most men are aware of a transition from the active to the contemplative way of life. They find their imaginations confined at last within the horizons of reality. Thought turns more upon things that are past and settled than upon things that are to come. At fifty men tend to cherish whatever is familiar and to distrust whatever is strange.

But Adolf Hitler, who today begins his second half-century of life, is one of those rare historical personages who dare not allow themselves the luxury of growing old. Where other men at 50 find it pleasant to relax the tempo of existence, the dictator must accelerate it.

Physically and emotionally he must push himself the harder because of natural unwillingness to do so. The driving force that has made it possible for him to magnetize mobs, to congeal a national will, to coerce the world, cannot for an instant be permitted to slow down. Unlike a monarch, even an absolute monarch, of an established dynasty, the dictator cannot trust custom to take over a job of which the will has grown weary. Habitual loyalties cannot maintain a seething national fervor.

Thus Adolf Hitler, at 50, is driven by a destiny more inexorable even than the will with which he drives the German people. Like Napoleon I, the ruler of the new Germany is himself ruled by the necessity of adding triumph to triumph. Like Napoleon he can afford no interludes of tranquillity.

Whether Hitler will attempt the task in which Napoleon failed, whether he will endeavor to extend his domination of Central Europe and bind his allies to him in permanent vassalage, is a story that will soon be told. But it is probably in the Fuehrer's mind today that at his present age Napoleon's career was over. At 36 the Corsican was master of Europe. At fifty he was a helpless prisoner, already agonized by the disease of which, less than two years later, he was to die.

If Conciliation Fails

For the past month representatives of the bituminous coal operators and the United Mine Workers have been trying unsuccessfully to negotiate a new agreement in the Appalachian field. Since April 1 work has been at a standstill, surplus coal supplies are fast disappearing and unless the deadlock is soon broken, many communities will be seriously inconvenienced by the crippling of essential public services.

The head of the Labor Department's Conciliation Service, Dr. John R. Steelman, has been sent to New York to continue the mediatory work of a subordinate. This shows that every effort is being made, short of direct Presidential intervention, to bring about a compromise of differences. Operators maintain that John L. Lewis' demand for abrogation of penalties, heretofore imposed upon miners who strike while an agreement is in force, is equivalent to a demand for the closed shop. Since abrogation of the penalty clause would leave the U. M. W. free to strike whenever members of a rival labor union entered the field, this interpretation seems warranted.

It appears, therefore, that in this case, as in many other recent instances, the break-down of collective bargaining is traceable to factionalism in labor's ranks. When labor disputes are localized and losses confined to a limited circle of workers and employers, the pressure of an aroused public opinion is not felt. But when a prolonged suspension of work occurs in a basic industry, the public begins to inquire into the causes of the breakdown and to ask who is to blame.

Organized labor in this country is entering upon a crucial stage of development. It has been given the opportunity to show whether it is capable of exercising its great power wisely and for the general good. This country still relies upon voluntary agreements and the aid of official conciliators to settle disputes. But looking at other countries where workers have lost the right not only to determine the conditions of employment but even the choice of employment, organized labor in the United States will, if wise, take warning.

What happens elsewhere may not happen here. But the continued provocation of unnecessary labor disturbances creates a deep-seated and justifiable resentment. In that state of mind the public may come to demand substitution of legal coercion, in place of the gentler methods of conciliation, to force prompt settlement of socially injurious disputes.

England And Russia

Acting under the pressure of obvious emergency, the British government has now made an alliance with Poland and has extended unilateral guarantees of military support to Rumania and Greece. Turkey and perhaps other nations are expected to join the bloc in the very near future. This eastern barrier to aggression, however, will continue to seem flimsy unless and until Russian support is secured.

To obtain this support is no easy problem. On the one hand, Russia was cold-shouldered at Munich and can now be expected to take her time, and to exact a price, before rejoining a coalition from which she was earlier so pointedly excluded. On the other hand, dislike of Communism is strong in Great Britain and France, and is supplemented by a definite fear of Russia in both Poland and Rumania. But the necessity forcing all these powers to join hands is tending to overcome their respective prejudices.

Immediately after Hitler's entry into Prague, the Moscow government suggested a six-power parley, by France, Great Britain, Poland, Rumania, Russia and Turkey, to "clarify" their positions. The idea met with little support in London and Paris and was rejected by Warsaw and Bucharest. Instead, Mr. Chamberlain adopted the alternative course of extending first to Poland, and later to Greece and Rumania, British guarantees of assistance in the event those countries are attacked and decide to resist. France has wholly approved this policy.

British leaders, including those hostile to the Soviet regime, realize, however, that neither Great Britain nor France can provide large-scale military assistance for any country in Eastern or Southeastern Europe. Russia is in a position to do so. Swallowing its profound distaste of Russian ideology the British government is, therefore, endeavoring to find a mutually satisfactory way of bringing Russia into the anti-Hitler bloc.

As yet they have not succeeded in doing so. Part of the difficulty is that both Poland and Rumania are as fearful of Russia as they are of Germany. They are particularly alarmed over the possibility that Soviet troops, crossing their frontiers to join in defensive action against a Nazi invasion, would not leave after the war was over and might, in the meantime, serve as nuclei for the spread of Communism.

Whether these fears are justified or not, they exist. And their existence has served to complicate the other obstacle of Russia's coy attitude towards current British blandishments. Yet the London-Moscow conversations are going on. There is now a strong possibility that a separate Anglo-Russian agreement will be made under which Russian material aid, in the form of planes, war material and supplies, would be offered even though no Russian troops are sent into Poland and Rumania.

Such an agreement would, in British eyes, fall far short of what is needed to stop Germany. For many Englishmen believe with Lloyd George that the inclusion of Russia in the new Grand Alliance "is a military matter of the first importance." But it may be the first step in the direction of the general security pact which Moscow insists upon, and which is probably essential if the axis powers are to be made to feel that their military position is inferior.

Aeronautical Research

Germany has no fewer than five major research stations for aeronautics. The Japanese government has just set aside 50,000,000 yen for the construction of a great aeronautical research institute, and other governments are following suit. But the United States, which once led the world in this field of scientific inquiry, a circumstance which helps explain our former supremacy in airplane construction and performance, is now lagging behind.

This would be unfortunate at any time. It is particularly unfortunate now that the Nation is forced to expand its military and naval aviation at a rapid rate. While the aeronautics laboratory at Langley Field, Virginia, has done and is doing remarkably good work, the needs of the situation have outrun facilities there. Another laboratory is urgently required and there is wisdom in the recommendation that this second research station be located, as proposed, in California, on the other side of the continent and close to the great aircraft factories of the West Coast.

The appropriation requested to make possible these additional and badly-needed facilities is only $4,000,000, which is little enough insurance to safeguard a contemplated expenditure of $255,000,000 for aircraft during the coming year. As the Chief of the Army Air Corps and the Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics of the Navy have pointed out, "America does not want second-best aircraft. To regain American leadership it is imperative that research facilities be materially expanded."

The Senate, therefore, is to be commended for including the $4,000,000 project for an additional air research center at Sunnyvale, Calif., in the second deficiency bill. The House, which has still to act on this matter, is unlikely to be behindhand in this effort to make American planes, both commercial and military, safer, faster and even more efficient.

Passage by the House yesterday of the bill to train 15,000 civilian pilots emphasizes the need for equipment of the greatest possible perfection.

Fortifying Amendments

As indicated by his speech before the Monday Evening Club, William A. Roberts, former people's counsel, is one of the city's most enthusiastic supporters of the Griffenhagen plan for reorganization of the District government. But even Mr. Roberts points out one feature of the bill which he does not like.

Mr. Roberts takes exception to the proposal that the Juvenile Court be merged with the Police and Municipal Courts into one tribunal. Certainly many local citizens who struggled for years to bring about enactment of the present Juvenile Court law will agree with him. The very purpose of that measure, enacted only last year, was to divorce Juvenile Court procedure from that of the Police Court. The modern way of handling juvenile delinquents is to keep them entirely away from criminal charges and the atmosphere of a formal court. Rehabilitation of child offenders, without arousing within them the psychology of a criminal, is a more important objective than a simplified grouping of courts.

Now that the Griffenhagen plan has been put into the form of a tentative bill, relatively minor issues of this sort ought to be frankly discussed. There is widespread approval for the basic principle of the bill and for many of its detailed provisions. But this indorsement will be much stronger when the bill is amended to meet legitimate objections from local citizen groups. For the sake of attaining more unified support for the measure its sponsors could well eliminate the controversial sections modifying the status of the schools, the libraries, the Alley Dwelling Authority and the Juvenile Court.

One other point which obviously needs further clarifying discussion is the prosecuting system proposed by the Griffenhagen bill. The functions of the United States district attorney here would be transferred to the proposed department of law under the local governing body. In some respects that transfer is logical. It would bring the police and prosecutors under the same jurisdiction. It would put the district attorney in the same status occupied by similar officials in other parts of the country.

On the other hand, it would divide the unified system of prosecution now prevailing here into two parts. Crimes would continue to be prosecuted in the name of the United States, but the agent of the Government in this instance would be a municipal officer. Some individuals accused of violating both District and Federal statutes would have to be tried in two separate courts on closely allied charges.

Problems of this sort call for thoughtful analysis by experienced legislators. It is to be hoped that they will be discussed without jeopardizing the constructive planning done by the Griffenhagen experts. For the issue is not one of acceptance or rejection of the original draft of the bill, but of enacting the best and most practicable legislation for the future government of Washington.

Exclude Me In

Samuel Goldwyn wanted to be included out. Iceland, apparently, wants to be excluded in. Iceland was not on the famous list of independent countries of Europe and the Near East regarding whose territorial integrity President Roosevelt made inquiry of Hitler and Mussolini.

No sooner did this news get to Reykjavik than the population of Iceland resented it. Was Iceland, they asked, being put in the same category as Danzig, Lichtenstein, Andorra? Was it, on the other hand, regarded by the great fellow democracy of the West as merely a possession of a European country, namely, Denmark, with which Iceland is actually linked only in the person of the king?

The Icelanders are too proud of their independence to accept any aspersion in that field, unintended though it might be. They don't want any guarantee by Hitler or Mussolini, for that might suggest that they are in danger of attack. But even more, they don't want to be left out of any list of independent nations.

Happily, the Department of State has now made the amende honorable. An official press release states that "no significance whatsoever should, of course, be attached to the omission of Iceland, in which we have always had the most friendly interest, but which is not on or immediately adjacent to the European Continent."

This should satisfy the Icelanders. Their plea: "Exclude us in" has met with an adequate response. They know that the warmth of American esteem is as pronounced as the rigors of their climate.

That's Comforting!

Hip Hip?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was interested—and amused—to read Miss Emmy Andersen's criticism of American women, as related in The Post of April 17. I quote: "Drawing an imaginary line about her slim hips with her hands, Miss Andersen pronounced: 'They all are too big here.'" Miss Andersen should study nude art and the normal female physique, and she would find that Mother Nature made no mistake when she provided the framework for a generous cradle for the developing rosebuds of the human family.

Both in the nude paintings of the "Old Masters" and Greek Art—probably the greatest statuary the world has ever produced, she will fail to find her idea of narrow-hipped women. I spent nine years in observing Greek statuary, and about that time in drawing from the nude, and no instructor ever put up a model with narrow hips as a "pattern" for us to study! Annette Kellerman's hips measure 37.8 inches, height 5 feet 4 inches. Venus de Milo's hips measure 38 inches, height 5 feet 4 inches. Diana's hips measure 37 inches, height 5 feet 3 inches.

If there is anything that looks grotesque—to an artist—it is a woman whose shoulders are broader than her hips! As Miss Andersen likes the men's broad shoulders, then about half our population seems all right. ART LOVER.

The World Crisis

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Much verbiage has poured forth from the so-called "Neutrality Group" urging complete isolation of this country from events occurring in Europe. Were this possible, it might be worth while spending a good deal of time considering the merits of such a viewpoint; however, it would seem to be clear to all thinking people by this time that there can be no such thing as complete isolation today.

As the President has pointed out, our economic, political and social life is so entwined with that of other countries that any material severance would be both impossible and impractical. We could hardly expect Americans to accede to the very low standard of living which would be necessitated by such a course of action.

Therefore, we are forced to the conclusion that the United States must take a stand; in that event it would seem the only sensible stand would be for our country to take the stand which would benefit it most.

Does it take much careful consideration to conclude that we would prosper most, materially and spiritually, if we are surrounded on all sides by countries believing in the same standards of democracy as we? The effect on this country of the constant threat of war caused by the fascist powers is apparent to even the most casual student of our domestic commerce.

There is one bill before the Senate Foreign Affairs Committee which aims in the proper direction. The Thomas amendment to the neutrality act recognizes that the fate of our country is involved in the fate of all other democratic countries.

It distinguishes between aggressor nations and their victims. It would permit our aid to countries attacked through no fault of their own, while at the same time it would foreclose help to the aggressor.

In the interest of the American people, the Thomas amendment should be enacted immediately.

LAURA SINCLAIR.

Washington, April 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The world continues to boil bloodily and perhaps the time has arrived to decide whether or not it wants to be governed by right or might. If we choose the former, the democracies must stand together. Hitler's book, "Mein Kampf," clearly reveals that the man recognizes only force.

Many logically maintain that it is none of our business what transpires in Europe and that we should avoid entangling alliances. Nevertheless, to others, equally well balanced, it certainly seems that it is our business when a powerful foreign government seeks to dominate the earth.

Few will deny that our attempts to make the world safe for democracy in the late war proved futile. Nevertheless, if "Kaiser Bill" had known that Great Britain and the United States would have been drawn into the fracas he would have hardly provoked it, which opinion prevails in military circles.

The fact that Messrs. Hitler and Mussolini are "talking it over" since President Roosevelt made his appeal would perhaps indicate that they fear to antagonize this vast and powerful country; otherwise they would strike. In any event, the dictators have been temporarily handcuffed. It, moreover, appears that Hitler "hesitates" simply because he has "lost" his abnormal zest for conquest, for the time being. "There's a reason."

E. K. GOLDSBOROUGH.

Washington, April 18.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Last Friday a world driving toward war halted momentarily. At least an instant of time was given all peoples to retrace their steps toward peace. Impending war was halted—not stopped.

The President has done all that he can to effect a just peace, but Hitler has not yet been fully convinced that his interests lie in accepting the President's proposals. He is waiting to see whether the President has the universal support of Americans—for he thrives on dissension. In fact, when necessary he manufactures dissension.

His printing presses have already started. Our newspaper reports indicate that the German-controlled press have as much as said that the American people are not behind the President. The dictator press characterizes this appeal as a mere "gesture." They insinuate that it is a "publicity stunt" aimed at "a third term."

The implications of these press accounts are enormous. It is apparent that Hitler counts upon and seeks to obtain the unwitting support of those opposed to the President.

Is there any factual basis for Hitler's expectation? Newspaper accounts of the comments of a substantial number of Congressmen show that they voiced either cynical criticism or at most lukewarm approval of the President's proposal. Such captiousness and cynicism is to Hitler's liking. Undoubtedly these comments from opponents of the President do not mean that their authors are intending to play the Nazi's game. So let's mark them down as being witless—yet in either case they may mean the difference between war and peace.

There is just one hope for peace—making it electrically clear to Hitler that the Congress, the press, every public leader and every American is 100 per cent for the President's proposals to Hitler. They are possible, just, timely and do not involve a single hazard to the security of this country. Unless they are accepted, a world of shambles is in prospect—a world from which America cannot escape. Time is precious—a unanimous resolution in both Houses of Congress supporting this appeal for peace is now in order. THOMAS HINCKLEY.

More Government Jobs

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post of April 1 I notice in "Letters to the Editor" column an article signed "Jobless," under the caption "Two Government Jobs" (in one family). This writer is either grossly uninformed or ultra conservative, as simply two of one family, holding Government jobs, doesn't complete the picture by any means.

I happen to know of many families where three are drawing salaries from Uncle Sam and, in one particular case, a family of five, four of whom are in well-paid Government jobs, leaving at home only the wife and mother. Let me state very plainly right here that I have never drawn one penny of compensation from the Government; I desire no job under it, and therefore I have no personal reason in stating the above. My only connection with the Government, Federal and local, is to pay into its coffers, in the form of taxes, about 20 per cent of a small personal income. This, of course, is necessary to help pay the salaries of the twos, threes and fours of other families drawing from the pool.

"Jobless" wants to know if this multiplicity of Government jobs in one family is a square deal or just a "New Deal." I believe the facts as stated herewith justify the paraphrasing as a "Rotten Deal." Am I right? JUST AN OBSERVER.

Washington, April 17.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter which was written by "Jobless" on April 17, with regard to Government employment, sums up the situation perfectly. It is my understanding that there are in all bureaus many couples, the salary of either of whom is sufficient to keep a family in comfortable circumstances. Many of these people spend much time in smoking, eating, and drinking coca-colas. And don't forget that some of them have never taken any kind of examination.

I mention this to show how little some employes appreciate the jobs which the taxpayers have given them. Small wonder that many people who are deserving and efficient have difficulty in getting work.

A FEDERAL EMPLOYE.

A Peace Conference?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Instead of calling a peace conference after another horrible war, why not call it now, before one starts?

If we must interfere in the foreign situation, let it be as the greatest Christian Nation calling a conference of all countries concerned. This would undoubtedly reveal that no one really wants a war, not even the dictators. Our officials should enter such a parley in the truly Christian method of dealing with such a problem, which is a sympathetic and understanding recognition that every nation has some talking points on its side, and also that they have all erred in some respects—including our own, and England and France!

That is the intelligent, adult way of handling the situation, instead of the little-boy method of throwing stones and sticking out tongues at each other, which only increases the belligerency of the leaders thus criticized. The Oxford Group is right. Only "moral rearmament" will solve our world problems. Civilization should be grown up enough by now to use brain, instead of brawn and human blood, which are worse than nothing in settling differences.

President Roosevelt's timely interference last fall averted a serious crisis. If all nations involved were included in another conference instead of just a few, and our President attended it in person, permanent peace might be established. At least it's worthy a try, don't you think? OLIVE S. FORD.

The Post Impressionist

Hey, Diddle, Diddle

FROM THE DAYS of Aristophanes on down to the Needles and Pins era, nonsense verses have been regarded as "songs of social significance." We are always ready to impute a meaning even when there is none, but the fact remains that the jingle ranks along with the cartoon as one of the deadliest of political weapons.

It is interesting to glance through a book on the nursery table and guess which of the rhymes were originally intended to be something more serious than juvenile entertainment. Some, of course, are simply the essence of common sense, or natural observation, or commendable examples of adaptation. Any earlier meaning that might have been read into the lines of "Mother Hubbard" is unimportant when compared to the lesson in adjustment to changing circumstances. "A stitch in time saves nine" might have anteceded silk stockings, but the application is still there. A world of domestic tragedy lies in the verse about the old couple who fell to fighting all because "I had money and he had none," and we find the dominant male asserting himself (and probably with justification) when Peter clapped his wife into a pumpkin shell.

We are told that all the innocent tales of childhood have as their background some problem of the human race, with direct or indirect implications. Some authorities believe that "The Cat and the Fiddle" is an allusion to the first wife of Henry VIII—Catherine la Fidele—but many of the origins are not so obscure.

Jack Horner is generally conceded to have been John Horner, the Abbot of Glastonbury, who delivered certain titles of property to Henry and came away with one of the choicest for himself—the title to the Manor of Mells. The old song about "John Patch made the match, John Clint made the flint, John Scott made the shot," concluding with the fact that John Ball shot them all, alludes to a priest by that name whose sermons inspired the peasants' revolt in 1381. The traveling cat that went to London and startled a mouse under the Queen's chair refers to the time Elizabeth was scared out of her wits and wig by an equally terrified mouse caught in the folds of her skirt.

Dwight Edward Marvin, in his "Historic Child Rhymes," gives a delightful example of tax avoidance in the song about the three wise men of Gotham who went to sea in a bowl. It seems that King John planned to go to Nottingham by way of Gotham, but the villagers were none too enthusiastic as they foresaw the dreadful burden of taxation that would follow the making of a public highway. When they discovered that a messenger had been dispatched to learn the cause of their inhospitality, the city fathers called a meeting and decided that all the townsmen should act like idiots when the emissary arrived. Of course the messenger reported that a town peopled only by fools was not a fitting place to receive the King. One senses that the Mayor of Gotham was a direct ancestor of Grandpa Vanderhoff.

The appalling cruelty of childhood is well illustrated throughout the pages of "Mother Goose," but there is evidence that the elders were responsible for much of it. Take the case of the two cats of Kilkenny, where each thought there was one cat too many, and finally, excepting their nails and the tips of their tails, instead of two cats, there weren't any. When the Hessians were quartered in Kilkenny, a favorite pastime was to tie two cats together by the tails, hang them on a line, and let them fight it out. This dubious sport was banned by the officers, but without much success. Upon one occasion the men were surprised at their play, and in order to hide the evidence they cut the cats down, leaving the tails hanging forlornly on the line. When the officer inquired as to the whereabouts of the cats, he was told that they had eaten each other up.

Far more sinister, however, is the early history behind the innocent game of London Bridge, which is said to hark back to the blackest age of superstition. Appeasement is not a new word, but in those days it was the evil spirit who demanded concessions, and human sacrifice was considered necessary for the erection of bridges. When we hear the shrill, happy voices of children reciting the woes of the builders (for as the bridge keeps falling down, they attempt to mend it with bricks and mortar, gold and silver), it is hard to realize that the youngster who is "caught" is symbolic of the victim.

But probably the most dramatic—and certainly one of the most beautiful—of the original forms is a poem in the Jewish Passover liturgy, a corollary of "The House that Jack Built." It begins, "A kid, a kid! My father bought a kid for two zuzim. A kid, a kid!"—meaning that Israel was led out of Egyptian captivity by Aaron and Moses. "Then came the Holy One—blessed be He!—and destroyed the Angel of Death, who killed the butcher, who slaughtered the ox, that had drunk the water, that had burned the staff, that had smitten the dog, that had bitten the cat, that had worried the kid, that my father had bought for two zuzim. A kid, a kid!" The ancient enemies of Israel are represented as the poem is built up—the Assyrians, the Babylonians, Persians, Greeks, Romans, and so on. The Holy One is, of course, the Messiah.

Apparently it is true that there is nothing new under the sun, when even the songs our children sing go back so far into history. It would be enlightening if, say, a thousand years from now, we could read a copy of a thirtieth century "Mother Goose." Perhaps we could find references here and there to the state of the nations in this day and age, and discover that Hitler and Mussolini were not so important, after all. Or we might learn that, like the Kilkenny cats, they eventually ate each other up.

Pitfalls Of Pity

By Katherine Lackey

Stefan Zweig's Novel

THE IDEA that one good deed done for a person does not absolve you of further effort, but rather binds you to an infinite number of good deeds is one fairly commonly accepted. The Chinese have a proverb to the effect that if you save a man's life, you are responsible for him thereafter. And it is a principle of English common law that if you help a person, you can't stop helping him until he is in at least as good condition as when you assumed the duty. I believe that in both countries, you are left free to decide whether you will take the initial step of compassion or not.

In "Beware of Pity" (Viking Press, $2.50), Stefan Zweig has applied this conception of duty to the specific case of an agreeable young cavalry officer in the Austro-Hungarian army in 1913. This young man is introduced to a young girl who is a cripple. Partly because he is bored with life in the small town where his regiment is quartered and appreciates the diversions of luxury and feminine society, partly because he is genuinely sorry for her, he forms the habit of calling on her every day, chatting, playing games, etc.

It is inevitable that she should fall in love with him; but he does not notice it until the exercise of pity has undermined his natural selfishness so that he is powerless to cast her off entirely yet lacks the strength to go through with what he has started.

HE IS influenced on the one side by the pathetic gratitude of the girl's father and by the stern conception of pity held by her doctor and by his own growing conviction that even a little man like himself might save his life if he could once face the pain of losing it; on the other side work the fear of what his fellow officers will think of his marriage to a wealthy cripple and his own desire to keep the freedom that he knows to be mediocre and boring, yet still finds precious. He veers between flight and self-sacrifice, always making matters worse, never able to make the definite step that will better them. He reaches a final decision when the World War breaks out of the clouds and relegates all personal problems to the background.

The theme is interesting and the young man's forward and backward motions believable if a little monotonous and predictable. Mr. Zweig has documented all his characters with the care of a biographer. For the most part, unfortunately, they seem to rattle a bit in the shell of information with which he provides them.

BY FORCE of the reader's own interest, an historical character, however banal in himself, can attract almost limitless documentation and move easily with it. Invented characters must be invested by the author with whatever of interest or glamour they are to hold for the reader, otherwise information will hang stiffly about them like an elaborately embroidered renaissance gown on a plain and awkward woman.

Occasionally, in the betrothal scene in particular, Mr. Zweig has effected a flowing relationship between the characters and what we know about them and lifted all the action onto a plane of imagination and charm. But such moments are few and for the most part we must be content with the thankless, if basic virtues of a novelist—careful writing, sound observation and a story that will bear thought.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Fabian Policy

THE FACT that the President's message is to receive a considered answer amidst the utmost publicity shows that public sentiment is still a great element in the choice between peace and war. It shows that the situation is not utterly hopeless. Had the first reports which reached this country on Saturday been true, that the President's suggestions would be rejected out of hand or wholly ignored, the outlook would have been very ominous indeed.

For this would have meant that the two dictators felt strong enough to defy any combination of potential enemies and so sure of the unquestioning support of their own people that they felt they had entire freedom to act as they liked. The decision to make some kind of reasoned reply to the President is an acknowledgment that the feeling of their own peoples, and of other peoples as well, have real weight in their calculations.

To have demonstrated this fact is in itself a promising achievement. For what makes the present situation so critical is that on the plane of purely military calculations the position of the axis has been deteriorating rapidly. Hitler and Mussolini have, therefore, been under extreme temptation to strike before it is too late to strike. The pace of British rearmament, the sensational recovery in France, the change in the position of Poland, the organization of another grand alliance so similar to that which confronted Napoleon, the British negotiations with Russia and Turkey, the strain on the German and Italian reserves—all these things have meant that time was running against the axis.

Alliance Deters Sudden Strokes

HITLER'S SPEECH at Wilhelmshaven, the one in which the broadcasting was interrupted, was a very threatening speech because it indicated that he was contemplating war as a means of breaking up the alliance that Mr. Chamberlain was organizing. Ever since that time the situation has been almost desperate, so desperate that there has been what amounts to mobilization for war in every country of Europe. The cause of the danger has been, and still is, that Hitler might feel compelled to strike at once in order to avoid finding himself later on in a position where it would be impossible for him to strike.

All the efforts to avert war have consisted in actions to persuade Hitler and Mussolini not to take the fatal decision. The most effective of the deterrent actions has been the construction of the European alliance and the hardening of the will to resist further aggression. This has sharpened the issue by confronting the axis with a situation where it is evident that they are facing the risk of general and total war, rather than the kind of thing they have done so successfully in Austria, Czecho-Slovakia, Spain, and Albania.

Now in a general and total war, providing their main adversaries can withstand the first attack, the victory will go to the side with the greatest staying power. For quick, short, sharp strokes a dictatorship can ignore public sentiment. But for a long war, it cannot. Public sentiment will play a great part in determining where the resources of the neutrals are to be available, and in a long war the morale of the people is a military consideration of the first order. The President's diplomatic intervention, since it followed the formation of an alliance in Europe which forecloses a victory by a knockout blow, revealed to the German and Italian nations how great is the risk to them of becoming involved in a great war. And the popular response revealed to their rulers how necessary it is for them to take account of the size of the external resistance and of their own people's feelings about the risks of a great war.

War Postponement Is Brightest Hope

HOW EFFECTIVE this diplomatic campaign will prove to be is, of course, unpredictable. But in estimating its effectiveness we must remember that as things are at the moment the utmost that we can hope from any policy is that it will postpone the outbreak of a world war. For it is only by postponing and postponing and postponing war itself that there is any chance whatever of creating the conditions, the atmosphere and the will for anything resembling a genuine peace settlement.

The fact of the matter is that there does not now exist either the will to make peace or a practical basis on which to make it. But it is also the fact that among the masses of all the peoples there is an awful dread of war and a profound longing for some means of escape from the danger of war. If the outbreak of hostilities can be postponed long enough, if a situation can be created where the chance of a victorious war no longer exists, then the human forces that are on the side of peace will have the opportunity and the time to assert themselves. That is why every action which renders victory more improbable, every action which deters those who might precipitate war, is also an action that serves to create the only conceivable condition of mind in which a genuine negotiated peace is possible.

The war, if it breaks out, might go on for several years. If we are realistic, we shall understand that the campaign to prevent the war will probably also last some years. The President has, for example, suggested pledges of non-aggression, disarmament and economic arrangements, as the alternative to war. We must not think the effort is a failure if we do not hear that a peace conference has been called next week or next month. As long as war is averted the President's move is not a failure.

Thus we shall not get disarmament quickly. But if the armaments are at least not used in battle, we shall be infinitely better off than if they were. We shall not get pledges of non-aggression that anyone believes in. But if there is no further aggression, we shall be better off than if half a dozen more nations were subjugated. We shall not soon get an economic peace. But if we can convince the Germans and Italians that we want an economic peace, they may face the outer world with hope rather than with despair.

World War Danger Not So Preposterous

PERHAPS THERE is some better way than this to save the peace and protect the whole world against the immense catastrophe. But thus far no responsible person anywhere has suggested a better way. All that we hear from the President's critics is either that he is imagining and inventing the danger of a world war, which is preposterous; or that nothing can be done to prevent war, which is a counsel of despair; or that in trying to prevent war, the President is taking certain risks, which would not exist if he folded his hands and resigned himself to the outbreak of a world war.

Of course, there are risks. The situation is full of risks. But surely a world war in Europe, Africa and Asia, and in the Atlantic and in the Pacific Ocean is the greatest risk of all.

Recovery Obstacles

By Mark Sullivan

7 Conditions Listed

MEN ASK, with deep concern, will there be business recovery? But their concern would be greater if all realized that not only is business recovery at stake, but much more.

There are at least seven conditions, all domestic, any one of of which probably, and the sum of which certainly, prevents business recovery. Because these conditions prevent recovery, they carry America toward a changed form of society—that is, from the system of private ownership to some form of collectivism. Necessarily the conditions which carry America toward collectivism carry it also toward a changed form of government, for it is inevitable that a change in the form of society must be accompanied by a change in the form of government.

The seven conditions overlap and interlock. For the sake of simplicity, they can be stated separately:

(1) Continued spending by government in excess of receipts, which has now gone on for eight years, and is still under way, with no end in sight. It remains as true today as when President Roosevelt said it on March 10, 1933, that: "Too often in recent history, liberal governments have been wrecked on the rocks of loose fiscal policy."

'Friction Taxes' Stall Business

(2) Two forms of tax, the capital gains tax and the undistributed profits tax. It is not the amount of these taxes that is fatal—the amount is small, relative to the total of taxes generally. The danger in these two taxes is the impediment, the brake, they put on business. It is the quality that causes some Treasury officials to speak of these as "friction taxes." With these taxes repealed (and with other conditions made right) business could go forward to a volume which would produce a much greater total of general taxes. Of all the conditions that prevent business recovery, this is the easiest to remove. High fiscal officials of the government want it removed. The Democratic leaders in Congress are willing to remove it. The motive of those who oppose removal is not easy to understand. It is impossible not to feel that these do not entertain any great concern for bringing about business recovery.

(3) Triple-A. Triple-A affects not only farming but all industry, the whole economic structure of the country. Triple-A expands, automatically, from within itself—for example, thus: (a) Reduce the amount of cotton grown; (b) this reduces the number of persons employed in cotton planting, ginning, spinning, and in the transportation of cotton and cotton products. (c) This added unemployment reduces ability to buy cotton goods. (d) This reduction of ability to buy cotton goods leads to further reduction of the quantity of cotton grown. And so on around the vicious circle.

Too Many Living On Government

(4) WPA, as now operated. It is not the amount of money spent on WPA—that is the primary danger. The primary danger is the practice of WPA in giving to persons dependent on WPA a slightly better standard of living than is received by persons dependent on private employment, on the economic level just above WPA. This practice, if continued, must steadily draw men from private employment on to the lists of those who get their living from government. When the number of the latter reaches—let us take an arbitrary figure—say 25 per cent of the whole, the structure of society will turn upside down, for 75 per cent in private employment cannot support 25 per cent living on government.

(5) The national labor relations act. This act, combined with the interpretation of it that is made by the Labor Board, combined with some practices of C. I. O., especially the sit-down strike, which C. I. O. has practiced and never repudiated, and which the Labor Board does not completely condemn—this combination is such as to discourage men from setting up new enterprises or expanding existing ones.

(6) Large unemployment. This is not separable from the other conditions—it is a consequence of the other conditions. But large unemployment is important because of the psychological factor it introduces. Men unable to get jobs for a long time become less loyal to private ownership, more ready to listen to proposals that private ownership be abandoned and collectivism substituted. Persons, and cults, who wish to bring about collectivism, necessarily wish to prolong unemployment, and not see it end.

Recovery Obstacles All Are Domestic

(7) A state of mind on the part of some in quarters within government which says, in effect, "the private ownership system is pretty sick, why not let it die?" There are some within government who affirmatively wish to end private ownership and bring about some form of collectivism. There are others who are not especially partisan for collectivism, but are not partisan for private ownership either. Private ownership can only be saved, and business recovery brought about, by an attitude which affirmatively and dynamically wishes to bring about business recovery.

All these obstacles to recovery are domestic. All are within our own control to change. It is true there is a foreign condition that is an obstacle. But the foreign condition alone would hardly hold us back if all the domestic conditions were ended. It is not necessary to remedy all the conditions at once. Remedy of a few would create a momentum which would remedy the others automatically.

Choosing Sides

By Barnet Nover

The Little Nations On The Spot

ACCORDING to a recent Gallup poll, the majority of Americans are convinced that in the event of another world war, the United States will not be able to keep out.

If that is the way people feel who are between three and six thousand miles removed from the potential area of conflict, it is easy to imagine what people are thinking about who live on the very edge of the volcano.

There were a few neutral nations in Europe during the World War. The Scandinavian kingdoms, the Netherlands, Spain, Switzerland, managed to stay out of the conflict. But the number of neutrals in the next war will probably be even fewer, and there is a real possibility that there will be no neutrals whatever.

THE NETHERLANDS and the Scandinavian nations succeeded in staying out of the war partly because they had the protection of British sea power; more particularly because, as neutrals, they could provide Germany with some of the outside supplies she desperately needed. Spain was able to stay behind the Pyrenees and Switzerland behind her Alps.

In the next war, Germany's reserve of gold and foreign exchange may be so small that she would find it difficult to buy Swedish ore, Danish butter and bacon, Norwegian fish, or use those countries as intermediaries for the purchase of supplies from overseas. What she cannot get through purchase she may seize. As for Spain, that country is already in the maelstrom of power politics, and may find it almost impossible to extricate herself when war breaks out.

And even traditionally neutral Switzerland may, willy-nilly, become involved. Between 1914-18 Switzerland was protected by Nature and diplomacy. She had four combatants on her flank but the four were equally divided into two camps, with the result that Switzerland was allowed to stay neutral. Now, however, any war in which Germany and Italy fight on the same side would probably mean the destruction of her neutrality, since the Swiss link is needed by the axis powers to accelerate the flow of goods and men between the two states.

IF THE OUTLOOK for the World War neutrals is dubious, it is even more so for the other small powers of Europe. The Poles, the Rumanians, the Yugoslavs, the Turks, the Magyars, the peoples of the little Baltic republics know full well that they live in a hurricane zone with no storm cellars to escape to. They do not want war, any more than do the French and British and Russians, or for that matter the overwhelming majority of Germans and Italians. But they are also aware that the choice between involvement and non-involvement in the threatened European conflict is not in their hands. They are in the grip of forces beyond their control.

This situation has not made for a clear and determined foreign policy. Great Britain has guaranteed support for Poland, Rumania and Greece, provided those nations are prepared to fight for their independence. But these nations remain uncertain members of the new "grande alliance" which Neville Chamberlain in the role of the younger Pitt is now trying to create as a barrier to further German aggression. And other nations have not yet made up their minds.

THE FACT that Great Britain has run up against very real obstacles in rounding out her anti-aggression bloc has undoubtedly encouraged the axis powers. Their strategy, therefore, has been to pursue two parallel lines. In the first place they have continued to put pressure on those powers which have joined the British camp so as to weaken both their faith in that bloc and also their capacity for action. Thus German pressure has undoubtedly reinforced the already deep-seated reluctance of Poland and Rumania to invite the assistance of Russia.

At the same time, the axis powers are doing all in their power to prevent the addition of any new nations to the anti-aggression bloc. For instance, the attempt is being made to neutralize Yugoslavia, whose position is very difficult, by soft talk of a nonaggression guarantee to be joined in by Germany, Italy and Hungary. Similarly pressure is being put on Turkey to remain neutral. The latter attempt may not succeed, despite the efforts of Von Papen. But the simultaneous pressure being put on Yugoslavia and Turkey may prevent the use of the Balkan Entente as an effective instrument for peace.

IN THE MEANTIME, Hungary has become the wholly pliant tool of the totalitarian powers. As a riposte to President Roosevelt's message of last Friday, Count Paul Teleki, at a dinner given in his honor in Rome, stressed Hungary's unwavering adherence to the axis. Through Hungary, Berlin and Rome hope to neutralize Yugoslavia, intimidate Rumania and probably wean Poland away from her new British moorings, or at least strengthen that country's antipathy to any arrangement with Russia. In return for its assistance in preventing the "encirclement" of Germany and Italy and thus paving the way for further aggressions, Hungary is assured of a further period of qualified independence and the hope of ultimate territorial reward. A nation fiercely proud of its independence, Hungary's role is not a happy one. Yet there is little else she can do.

ACTUALLY every small nation in Europe would like to occupy a neutral position as between the two camps that have arisen on the continent. For the great majority of them that is a vain hope. They must choose. But whatever their choice, danger awaits them. It is not surprising then that they seek to postpone the day of decision as long as possible.

The Once Over

Facts About New York For World's Fair Visitors

New York is a city composed of the Bronx, Manhattan, Queens and Park Commissioner Moses. It is conveniently situated with respect to the Fair and can be easily identified by its tall buildings, "No Parking" signs, traffic messes, court scandals and policemen asking for directions to given points.

The main avenues run north and south and the cross streets run from east to $400 a month. It has one of the most modern systems of traffic lights ever wholly ignored.

Manhattan Island is the home of more public garages too small for the purpose than any city in the East, and one of the interesting sights is watching the garage attendants trying to locate and extract cars which can't even be traced.

Thoroughfares

Its most famous street is Fifth avenue, the upper end of which is full of elaborate homes of famous people who haven't lived there in years. At Fifty-ninth street and Fifth avenue is the famous bronze statue of Gen. Sherman and his horse, both still waiting for the light to turn from red to green.

At Fifth avenue and Twenty-third street is the Washington Elm in which Washington Irving once lived. It is now used as a home by Thomas E. Dewey. Another famous street is Broadway, which is a World's Fair in itself. It has no trylon or perisphere, but it has more burlesque shows, fan dancers, flea circuses, hamburger counters, orange drink stands, cut-rate razor blade stores, mounted policemen, checker games and people who go around talking to themselves than anywhere else on earth.

At one end is the Aquarium, which was once Castle Garden, where George Washington gave his first song recital in this country. At the other end is the Lafayette Oak, under which Edgar Allan Poe once lived. It is now the home of six Brooklyn judges.

Rivers and Harbors

Manhattan has a river on each side, both in good shape considering their age. If you are thinking of getting around much this summer you had better bring a folding boat and use the rivers. Taxicabs, trucks and road hogs are not allowed in them, although it would seem just the place for 'em.

Financial Zone

Wall street is located at the lower end, or was at yesterday's market closing. On a clear day it can be seen with the naked eye. It was once quite a place. On the site where the Stock Exchange once stood is the Israel Putnam Elm, where Pocahontas once lived. It is now the concentration camp of the S. E. C.

Party Must Name Liberal, Says Roosevelt

More important even than that, on you depends the future of our country.

Party organization is the vehicle by which the mobilized sentiment of the United States gets anywhere. If the chauffeurs of the organization are wise in picking the course, the going is good and the destination aimed at is reached. If, on the other hand, they are witless, the organization will find itself on a rocky road and the probabilities of flat tires and other breakdowns are so great that the will of the people gets nowhere.

Hits "Back-Seat Drivers"

This means distress to the party, of course, and likewise distress to the Nation. For in the present political and economic situation the alternative in the event of failure for our party to keep straight ahead, is for the country to find itself traveling in the direction exactly opposite to that it has in mind.

Incidentally, the progress of our political car is not helped by the clamor of the back-seat drivers who point out the apparent smoothness of the detours of compromise and subterfuge, and complain of the speed of our going.

The Democratic Party of itself cannot elect a President. The Republican Party is in the same fix. This is fortunate for all of us, for it means that no party can continue in power unless its polices are such as to add to its basic strength the ten or more millions of votes that are cast for ideas and ideals, rather than because of the emblem at the top of the ticket.

In the campaign we are now approaching there is just one agency potent enough to defeat the Democratic Party, and that is the Democratic Party itself. It can commit suicide by abandonment of the polices that brought it to power. There is no use fooling ourselves. If we are to have a reactionary regime—or if that term is too horrific—call it a conservative regime, you may depend on it that it will be the other fellow's regime.

We shall forfeit the multitude of Republican liberals who voted with us in '32 and '36 if we shift our ground. Even those men and women with little or no affiliation with either party, and who went with us because we voiced their principles, will quit us in disgust if we throw them down now.

Warns Against Party Rift

We can also destroy our chances by fratricide. No victories are won by shooting at each other. There never was, and never will be, a political party whose policies absolutely fit the views of all its members. Where men are at variance with the course their party is taking, it seems to me there are only two honorable courses—to join a party that more accurately mirrors their ideas, or to subordinate their prejudices and remain loyal.

I do not mean by this, of course, that they are not quite within their rights when they seek to change the program. It would be a poor sort of politician or statesman who did not fight for his sincere principles, but that is a different thing from allying themselves with their party's enemies and getting in a stab wherever and whenever they can do so safely.

I have pointed out the ways in which our party can destroy itself. Now may I suggest how victory, which is quite within our reach, can be won next year?

Instead of suicide or fratricide, what is the matter with our own side? Whenever the party was Democratic it won. Whenever it offered the country an ersatz Republicanism, the people spurned the imitation and sent our party to stand in a corner until it had learned its lesson. Unfortunately, it sometimes takes from 10 to 20 years to accomplish the requisite re-education.

Suppose, for a change—and you know I am frequently accused of being devoted to change—we learn our lesson this time without being sent to the corner to meditate?

This country of ours is democratic with a small "d." It is never, and never will be Democratic with a big "D," except when the two words mean the same thing.

With the highest hopes and expectations that the Young Democrats will continue with their youthful enthusiasm, and yet retain their old faith as enunciated by Thomas Jefferson and Andrew Jackson.

Figures Should Have Spring Overhauling

Right Exercises Will Change Measurements Redistribution of Weight Will Help Dieting Alone Is Not Enough

By Ida Jean Kain.

ABOUT THIS time of the year, woman expresses her rebellion against things as they are by putting on a spring cleaning campaign that leaves the family astounded and uneasy at her display of energy. That's just the frame of mind you should be in to start your figure program!

If you are the average woman, you have been experiencing recurrent twinges of dissatisfaction with your figure and have fully intended, some day, to begin doing something about your own appearance. Well . . . all you have to do to accomplish miracles is to expend on yourself some of that fine housecleaning energy you've been flinging around the home.

IDA JEAN KAIN

Dieting is fine. There's nothing like a good diet to take off weight, but when it comes to making over the figure, it can't compare with exercise. Without losing an ounce of weight you can take off inches with exercise, and look any number of pounds slimmer. You can change your measurements entirely, and you can counteract any sagging of the tissues—caused by lack of muscular tone—which makes you look unnecessarily old.

Redistribute Weight

If your weight is about normal, and you cannot diet without losing too much weight from your face, this is exactly the kind of program you need.

Perhaps you are like the young woman who writes, disgustedly, "I am pretty sick of seeing that dumpy lady in the mirror, but when I diet my face gets so thin and drawn that I look older instead of younger." In that case, don't diet! You don't need to lose weight! All you have to do is redistribute your weight, and that calls for exercise.

Pick and choose your exercises carefully to include all the isolated spots that tend to flabbiness. If you lose weight too easily from the face, the same is likely to be true of the throat, and since seven-eighths of the throat column is composed of muscle tissue, throat exercises will more than repay you. You probably are also in line for exercises to firm the backs of the upper arms, to slim the waist and hips and to strengthen the tummy.

Effective Exercise

For the most part you will have to adopt specific exercises for these areas, but here is a general exercise that is amazingly effective:

Begin by standing erect, feet slightly apart, head dropped back on the neck, arms straight out at the sides from the shoulders. Lunge forward on the right foot, bending the knee a bit, and at the same time bending smartly at the waist, as you try to touch the forehead to the right leg just above the knee, and fling both arms backward. Return to position and repeat, lunging with the left foot. Keep pulling up with the tummy muscles throughout.

New Slip Covers Renovate Home

JUST WAIFS—that bulky, dingy sofa, that odd looking chair!

But what a difference when you cover their worn spots with easily made slip covers, cleverly use gay colorful fabrics to turn them into a harmonious pair.

Does that mean to make both covers exactly alike? No, smart these days to vary them a little.

For the sofa, combine a coral flowered cretonne with a plain coral crash. For the chair, an all-cretonne cover or one of a beige and coral stripe. Finish seams of both pieces with plain coral binding.

But, whatever the style of your slip covers, simple to make them the pin-on way. No patterns to buy. No equipment but scissors, needle, thread—and lots of pins.

Begin by smoothing the material over inside-back and seat—right side out for bound seams. Allow a 4-inch tuck-in between back and seat to relieve strain.

You'll find a sofa as easy to cover as a chair—even when you combine fabrics. You just have two or three inside-back sections instead of one. As you cut only one section at a time when you work the pin-on way, simple to put in plain or figured sections where you want them to be.

Complete instructions and diagrams for striking slip covers are given in our 40-page booklet, Making Slip Covers Successfully. Tells how to cut, fit, sew slip covers for all types of chairs, sofas. Gives decorator's suggestions for fabrics, trimming. Upholstered covers.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, Making Slip Covers Successfully, to The Washington Post Home Institute, 109 19th street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your Name, Address and the name of booklet.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, April 19.

WHEN THE FOLKS pour into our town this summer for a look at that World's Fair (if, indeed, they do) they will find a city of 7,000,000 people between their trains, buses or motors and the show grounds. And few, indeed, will be those who don't loiter for quite a spell to inspect this frantic, mad, congested hamlet. Maybe Grover Whalen is even worried that they'll spend most of their loose folding money before they ever do get to the fair!

ALICE HUGHES

What would you want to see most if you came to New York in the next few months? Seems to me it's pretty obvious that this is a fine case for warfare between Mom and Pop. The Battle of the Sexes, 1939 style. It is pretty safe to say that the girls will wage an awful shindy to spend most of their time wandering the great shopping avenues, such as Fifth and Madison, window-peering and aisle-meandering in the mighty bazaars. And why not? Those streets are something to see, at any time and in any league.

The lads, on the other hand, will be more avid to bear west a little and inspect the murky, muddled confines of Broadway and Times Square. Not to drink or wink at girls, of course—just to investigate the location of all this widely advertised "fun, fight and frolic."

The other day little Toby Wing, once a blonde flutterbudget of screen and stage, left a hospital here in her new role, that of mother. With her was her new son, Dick Merrill, jr., whose pappy is the famous airplane pilot who flew Harry Richman across the Atlantic and back, among other things. Toby carried the new role with great dignity, but I was amused to see that a Hollywood touch persisted. She wore the dark cheaters which are the trademark of the movies actress. On the other hand maybe her eyes hurt.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Our little mayor, Brother LaGuardia, is now a nationally known figure, but few yet realize what a power is wielded in his personal and political life by his wife. For instance, we have just learned that he has promised her, honor-bright, to retire from the mayor business in 1941. Long before their marriage she was his secretary and right-hand-woman in his many Congressional campaigns—and suddenly Fiorello realized that it must be love, because he felt so wonderful. Their marriage has been an even greater success than was their long political association—and after working 23 hours a day at his stupendous job he goes right home to her and their two children in a very modest apartment far up Fifth avenue. Great little fellow, this Fiorello—but what Mrs. LaGuardia says, goes.

This column appears daily and Sunday.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay,

Spring Fever

YOU STRETCH achingly trying to muster strength to get out of bed. Why are you so tired? Well, you got in late for one thing . . . and it's spring for another. But, of course, the real thing is that you need a rest. A real rest. Not just a vacation, but that long, long rest you have been planning to take for years and years, that time when you are going off somewhere for six months—maybe a year, and just vegetate.

The familiar vision rises before you. You see yourself stretched supine in the grass beside a clear singing stream in the fastness of a mountain. Just hugging the ground and idly watching the clouds drift . . . drift . . . drift.

As you dress, you notice that your waistband seems a little tight. Yes, and your skirt draws over the hips. Can it be that—that you are letting yourself go? Well, you simply haven't the strength to do exercises in the spring. Anyway, nobody will notice it—now. And when you get off on this long rest you'll do something about your figure. You'll spend a lot of time on your body—take walks and do exercises and deep breathing and sit for hours anointed in oil. Yes, and swim and lie in the sun—say, maybe you'd better change from the mountains to the seashore. That's it! Some sequestered cove along the bay or the ocean, where you can lie wistfully watching the waves and perhaps talking with the simple fishing folk.

Your skin is murky, you realize as you put on the powder. You take stock of yourself in the mirror discovering new blemishes and new lines. And look at your posture! You are sagging like an old woman! Well, of course, you've been busy and you've been neglecting yourself and . . . and . . . well maybe you are getting a little older.

Oh, no, it's not that! It's just that you need a good rest. Once you get away somewhere and begin looking after yourself you'll come back in a big way. You'll give yourself a good overhauling. And live simply and naturally. No paint, no powder, no lipstick, no wave sets. Just run around barefooted with your hair hanging down—maybe at some secluded farm down in the country—and drink milk, eat fruits and vegetables, get all the right vitamins. Make yourself into a new and beautiful woman.

You note it is getting late, slam your hat hurriedly on your head. There's that anthology of poetry you must return to the library. And you haven't looked at it! That's one thing you'll do when you take your long rest—read all the world's great literature. Yes, and meditate a lot. Why, now you never have time to think. You see too many people. You're sick of people—and all this mechanical civilization. Why, you never have a chance to sit down and think what it's all about! What is it all about, anyway? And why are you rushing this way?

Well, anyway, you'll really get a perspective on it when you take this long rest . . . Maybe an island would be best. Some remote little island that tourists don't know about—but with modern conveniences. Just go off there and be alone . . . and get thoroughly rested . . . and make yourself over . . . and figure out what it's all about.

You give yourself a final glance in the mirror. Tired, harried, artificial, no light shining through. Well, it's this life you lead. Anyway, it'll all be different after you take this long rest. And it won't be long now. Maybe you'll get around to it next year . . . well, if not then . . . maybe the next.

Neurotic Woman Offers More Data on Her Problem, Discussed Here Monday; Asks Indulgence

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: If you haven't already answered the first letter I wrote you, perhaps this one will throw more light on the problem. Please bear with me while I make one more effort to state the case . . . I have muddled and pondered over myself and my situation for so many years, have appealed to so many people (to my own mortification and to no constructive end) so that there is now so much shame, fear and confusion intermingled that I can't seem to weed out the real issues from those that are imaginary . . .

Every troubled state of mind seems to present a new angle and I can't see it as a whole long enough to present it fairly to anyone. Sometimes I fancy that if I could see it as a whole just once, my own insight and understanding would take command and carry me through. Vagueness, depression, confusion, unreality, anxiety, glimmerings of inspiration to create something and a desperate desire to express my more worthwhile self, and thereby attain some poise, are the conflicts that go on from day to day . . . Won't you help me some way? . . . Yours.

M. P.

DEAR M. P.: As you may have seen, your first letter was answered through this column under date of April 17. That reply was already in print when your second lengthy document was delivered to me. Reviewing my remarks in the light of this further presentation of your problem, I see no reason to withdraw or to qualify any of those remarks; but it occurs to me that some further discussion might possibly be of some benefit to you.

I might confront you with some figurative illustrations of your largely self-induced confusion. First, let us say that you are in somewhat the position of a person passing his life away studying himself with magnifying glass, microscope, X-ray machine, fluoroscope and whatever other instruments of similar kind he can lay hands on and train upon himself. It stands to reason that anyone who would subject himself to continuous scrutiny via such mediums would find himself a pretty revolting and mystifying spectacle. He would come gradually to the point where he couldn't see the forest for the trees—so far as getting a line on himself as a personality, or social entity, or human being, is concerned. Such exhaustive concern with physiological and psychological minutae is for the scientist, not for the layman and average citizen.

A sense of personality-cohesion, of physical and social well being, is achieved by mankind as a whole through function and not through self-analysis. Does the person who aspires to play the piano concentrate morbidly upon the tremendously complex physiological structure of his hands, assuming that if and when he knows all about their muscular, bony, nervous, arterial and capillary structure, he will automatically become master of the keyboard? Hardly. He takes his hands for granted, doesn't bother about the whys and wherefores and intrinsic peculiarities of those members, and proceeds to discipline them in the technique of striking the keys. It is exactly that sort of thing which you (a) have been doing, and (b) failing to do. You have been placing all emphasis on morbid scrutiny of self; and no emphasis on rational use of self,

You remind me a little of a person who is in possession of a handsome acreage on which it is your avowed intention to build a house. You are surrounded by stacks on stacks, and piles on piles, of all necessary building materials, and yet, for 20-odd years, you have made absolutely no progress in building that house—as a result of sheer muddle-headed refusal to get going and keep going with some sort of plan.

You are up to your ears in innumerable specifications of various kinds, all half-sketched only, all eventually discarded—rejected on the theory that they don't quite capture your ideal of the ultimately desirable castle-of-dreams. You spend the idle days snooping about amongst your building materials, trying to find out what your equivalents of bricks and straw and plaster and concrete and timber and steel, etc., etc., are made of; instead of trying to find out what practical, permanent and perhaps even beautiful use you can put them to.

The best advice that I can give you—the only helpful advice, so far as I know, that anyone can give you—is this: Get going, even at this late date, with an extroverted program of work, leading to some sort of accomplishment or contribution, however humble and unsung it may be in operation or in final summing up. Stop trying to prove yourself, by introspective assessment, the erstwhile undiscovered eighth wonder of the world, who was meant for magnificent things if only someone would lead her by the nose, while another urged her from the rear, into the role which destiny had planned for her. I think you are a normal human being, essentially; of normal social endowment; who is perhaps as much daunted by her own grandiose expectations of herself as she is by any challenges with which life has confronted her.

I daresay, with all your psychoanalytic and psychiatric and other intellectually exercising experiences, you would consider it scarcely worth while to read Dr. Henry C. Link's book, "The Return to Religion," as well as some of his more recent writings, and follow the superlatively health-giving advice contained therein. But if you wish to be helped, that is what you should do. It's high time you forswore the idea of riding to glory on the shoulders or on the coattails of some perspiring mentor, and took the uphill grade on your own powers, at a pedestrian pace—as all of us must do, if we hope for psychological salvation.

Voice Rules Are Suggested By Bette Davis

Hollywood, Calif.—Bette Davis believes a good speaking voice, like a good carriage, is based on proper breathing. She suggests that the day begin and end with the well known arm-stretching, breathing exercises. The simplest one in her daily routine requires very deep breaths. When the air is exhaled, even the lowest part of her lungs is emptied. While expelling the air she moves her head slowly from side to side but never cuts off the air stream.

A halting manner of speech often can be overcome, says Bette, by increasing the vocabulary and concentrating on what one is saying. The vocabulary grows by much reading, looking up the pronunciation of new words in the dictionary, and immediately using them. Speech concentration requires practice.

"And don't forget to pronounce final consonants," is Bette's last warning to one who would have a pretty speech.

Charm Shelves Can Work Color Magic

—says "Mary Annette"—Decorating Hostess of The Hecht Co.

Charm shelves aren't new . . . in fact, at present there's quite a vogue for them. And they certainly aren't expensive. Some may be had for as little as a dollar. However, few women make the most of these decorative glass shelves that can be hung in the window without interfering with its movement in any way. True, they are ideal for potted plants, but they also can be used in many other ways. In a room with rather cold, Northern exposure, they can add the warmth of color merely by using decorative colored glass bowls and vases that will catch whatever light there is and reflect it in warm rays into the room. If you have a penchant for collecting quaint figurines or animal novelties, you can group them effectively and make your charm shelf a centre of interest to all who enter the room. And if you still prefer using them for plants, try your hand at coaxing some growing ivy tendrils around the frame of your window. A little string and some patience is all you'll need.

Consult Mary Annette or any of our other decorators at any time, without any charge or obligation whatsoever . . . or, if you prefer an appointment, call NAtional 5100, Branch 500.

Honey Adds Flavor to Foods

By Martha Ellyn.

The Post Food Editor.

THERE'S an endless assortment of honeys and one would have to live to a great old age to be able to taste a fraction of them. Honey takes its distinctive flavors from flowers and varies in color as well as flavor, because of the flowers from which the bees gather the nectar. Orange flower honey of California has a certain delicacy, while the honey made by the Trappist Fathers in Canada has a lusty flavor. The cotton and buckwheat honey, too, should have a rising vote.

Honey is at its best uncooked and may be used as a spread for toast, griddle cakes, waffles, biscuits and other hot breads. In combination with other foods, such as nuts, grated orange peel, chopped dried fruits and peanut butter, it makes delicious sandwich spreads.

Honey Nut Bread

Sift 2 cups flour, 3 teaspoons baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt. Add ½ cup coarsely chopped nuts to sifted dry ingredients. Combine 1 beaten egg, ½ cup honey, ½ cup milk, 2 tablespoons melted butter and add to first mixture. Stir until ingredients are well moistened. Bake in a greased pan in a moderate oven for 45 to 50 minutes.

Springtime Social Whirl Here Centers on Ladies' Luncheons

Mme. Ertegun Is the Guest of Honor At Mrs. John O. Herrick's Party; Mrs. Holcomb Fetes 'Residentials'

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

"THERE NEVER WAS A TOWN like Washington for ladies' luncheons," was an over-the-shoulder comment I heard from one in a trio of males fleeing from Pierre's yesterday around 1 o'clock. I was disposed to think he had something there—when I looked around in the downstairs lobby, saw it crowded to the walls with women, and noted them still arriving in droves.

HOPE R. MILLER

Upstairs, there were dozens of luncheon parties, feminine variety; in fact, if there was a man around, I didn't see him. Truth is, ladies' luncheons flourish at all seasons in Washington, but they burst into full bloom in the spring, when the town is bulging with visitors, D. A. R. delegates and what-not.

One of the most pleasant on the long list of luncheons yesterday, however, neither feted nor included an out-of-towner. Mme. Mehmet Munir Ertegun, wife of the Turkish Ambassador, was guest of honor; Mrs. John O. Herrick, the hostess; and several topnotch officials were in the company of 12 that lingered over coffee until mid-afternoon.

Mme. Ertegun was rejoicing over the recent arrival of her eldest son, who has been attending school in Paris the past two years and now plans to pursue his studies here. Incidentally, she wore a smart hat that would be a fashion item in any gathering. Turban effect, it was fashioned of figured silk in a variety of colors and was set off with a flowing scarf that looped around her neck and accented her black frock.

Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, looking, as usual, as if she had stepped out of a bandbox, had on a navy suit and hat with matching accessories and a pale blue blouse with a double ruffle down the front. (Speaking of fashion notes—have you seen that big blue leather bag of hers, with its tricky big bow that forms part of the handle? Prettiest thing of its kind I've glimpsed lately.)

Mrs. Vandenberg Among Guests

Besieged with requests for that doughnut recipe you've been hearing about was Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, who adds a lively note to any gathering. And while talk turned on culinary lines, she volunteered directions for "avocado loaf," another of her specialties. Mrs. Scott Lucas said she would try it. Others in the company who made mental notes of the recipe were Mme. George Boncesco, of the Rumanian Legation; Mrs. Paul Alling, in a trim black and white ensemble; Mrs. James D. Le Crown, Mrs. Wilson Compton, Miss Ruth Jones and Mrs. Bulkley Griffin.

Incidentally, Mrs. Herrick is on her way to Teaneck, N. J., this morning, where she and Mr. Herrick will enter that prize deerhound, "The Abbott," in a contest. Wherever dog shows are, there you frequently find the Herricks. They have collected blue ribbons and trophies all over the country.

Mrs. Douglas Feted at Shoreham

But back to yesterday's parties—Mrs. William O. Douglas, wife of the newest Supreme Court Justice, was guest of honor at a luncheon given by Mrs. Barnet Nover at the Shoreham. One of the prettiest and most popular wives in the official set, Mrs. Douglas has been feted high, wide and handsome the past few weeks.

The luncheon table yesterday was centered with a huge bouquet of calla lilies and narcissus, carrying out a yellow and white color scheme. Stimulating talk made the rounds in the company of 20 and so did a decorative piece of parchment on which guests signed their names "so the honoree would remember who was there." Also in the line of record-keeping was the leather-bound book, a gift to Mrs. Douglas from her hostess, to be used either as a diary or merely for "whatever she wished to remember."

Envoys' Wives Attend Party

Others in the company were Mme. Bostrom, wife of the Minister of Norway; Senora de Castro, wife of the Minister of El Salvador, and her sister, Miss Angela Cromeyer; Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Countess de Gramont, Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Mrs. Ernest Gruening, Mrs. Henry White Edgerton, Mrs. A. C. Acheson, Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mrs. Felix Morley, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mrs. Ernest K. Lindley, Mrs. Edgar Turlington, Mrs. Eldon King, Mrs. Bernard Kilgore and Miss Martha Douglas, of Chicago, sister-in-law of the guest of honor.

Later yesterday, Mrs. Douglas dropped in for tea with Mrs. Samuel O. Clark, jr., who has as her house guests her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Northrop, of New Haven, Conn. The small, informal tea company included Miss Martha Douglas, who will return home today, and Mrs. Bruce Smith, who is spending some time in Washington.

Mrs. Holcomb Is Luncheon Hostess

Mrs. Thomas Holcomb, wife of the Commandant of the Marine Corps, entertained in her home at the Marine Barracks, having among her guests a number of "residentials."

In the party were Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, Mrs. Mason Gulick, Mrs. McCeney Werlich, Miss Betty Scriven, Miss Virginia Hunt, Miss Lydia Loring, Miss Angelica Remey, Miss Margaret Delano Gage, Miss Mary Howry, Miss Elizabeth Howry, Miss Downing, Mrs. Charles Brooks and Miss Julia Whiting, of Middleburg, Va.

Mrs. Sheridan Downey, wife of the Senator from California, was ranking guest at the luncheon given by Mrs. Francis Cabell Brown in honor of Mrs. J. F. Twohy, of San Francisco. The party took place at Pierre's, and everybody in the company either lives, or has lived, in California.

Mrs. Twohy, who with her husband arrived in Washington a few days ago, will be at the Hay-Adams for several days. This evening they will be feted at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Nugent Fallon.

Guests at yesterday's luncheon, in addition to Mrs. Downey and Mrs. Twohy, were Mrs. Justin Miller, Mrs. Frank H. Buck, Mrs. Henry F. Grady, and Mrs. Charles Colden, of San Pedro, Calif.

British Ambassador to Give Garden Party for King and Queen on June 8

INVITATIONS to the annual garden parties at the British Embassy always say "weather permitting." What general frustration there would be if it should chance to rain on Thursday, June 8, when the Ambassador and Lady Lindsay will entertain the King and Queen on the beautiful grounds of the embassy. In the ten years the Lindsays have been here, it has only rained twice when such functions were planned, so maybe "Lindsay Luck" will hold again on the big day. Or maybe one just never calls off parties for royalty.

THE MANY planning to tour the old homes of Georgetown, which will be opened to the public tomorrow and Saturday afternoons for the benefit of St. John's Church should know:

That for many years after the Nation's Capital was moved in 1800 from Philadelphia to the brand new city of Washington, the foreign embassies and legations were located in Georgetown, "the social and business center of the District of Columbia. Georgetown with its fine mansions but poor and narrow streets was a city of houses without streets; while Washington was a city of streets without houses."

That one of these early legations was Peter's Grove at Thirtieth and R streets, where the British Minister, John F. Crampton, lived, and later the French Minister, Count de Sarteges. On this site is now the home of Col. and Mrs. William Donovan. When the original house was destroyed by fire, part of the property became the home of Harriet Beall Williams, "the most famous girl who ever grew up in Georgetown" because of her marriage in 1849 to Baron de Bodisco, the Russian Minister.

That at this brilliant wedding Harriet was given away by Henry Clay. The Baron's groomsmen included President Van Buren; the Netherlands Minister, Mr. Martinian, the minister from Texas, Mr. Dunlop; the British Minister, Henry Fox; the Austrian Minister, Baron Sarnyse, and James Buchanan, who had been Minister to Russia.

That the 16-year old bride was taken in a gilded four-horse coach to her new home, where the bridegroom had filled the table drawers with presents for her, including handsome jewelry. But what pleased her most was a drawer he filled with chocolates. This beautiful old house, 3322 O street, is now the home of Mr. and Mrs. Francis DeWolf, and will be open both tomorrow and Saturday.

SPRING FASHIONS were very much in evidence at the small cocktail party given yesterday afternoon by Mrs. George T. Summerlin, jr. The hostess wore a black silk dress, with a flaring skirt and fitted bodice trimmed around the neck with a collar of old lace. Mrs. David Barry was in a smart blue wool suit and a sailor trimmed with two wings on the brim. Mrs. Emory Smith wore a black suit and a natural-colored straw hat trimmed in black ribbon which ended in streamers dangling down the back.

Definitely the "King of the party" was Commander Ralph Bates, who was getting a warm welcome from his friends, who have not seen him since he left for California last spring. He flew East earlier in the week to spend a few days of leave and will leave again tomorrow for a New York week-end.

Mrs. Summerlin always serves excellent homemade sandwiches, with the bread cut thinner than one ever finds anywhere else. Others who dropped in at her party yesterday were her father-in-law, George T. Summerlin of the State Department; Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell, Stellita Stapleton, in a figured print, Mrs. Pearsons Rust, Robert Coe, Commander Jerauld Wiltse, Robert Buell, Mrs. Stanley Woodward, Edwar Gardner, Harold Sims and Benjamin Plunket.

MRS. Merchant Mahoney, wife of the Commercial Counselor of the Canadian legation, held a second "at home" yesterday in the series she is giving. Boughs of apple blossoms decorated the living room and a fire blazed away on the hearth.

Among those who dropped in were Mrs. Sol Bloom and Miss Vera Bloom, who wore a smart spring coat, wine colored, with little glass flowers on the lapels; Mme. Hurban, Mrs. J. P. Summerscale, wife of the Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy, who said her husband's parents had arrived from England for a visit, and Miss Nora Magee, who wore a smart navy blue outfit with a broad-brimmed hat to match.

Son of Roosevelt Secretary Weds Frances Murrey

Logan McIntyres Will Make Home In Philadelphia

Of wide interest to Washington was the wedding last evening in Lewisburg, Tenn., of Miss Frances Battle Murrey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Floyd Murrey, of that city, to Logan Kennedy McIntyre, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin H. McIntyre, of Washington.

The ceremony took place at 8 o'clock in the Methodist Church, the Rev. C. P. Thogmorton, of Charleston, Mo., uncle of the bride, officiating. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a Victorian model of satin, made with a fitted basque bodice, long sleeves shirred below the shoulders, and a full shirred skirt forming a sweeping train. Her veil of ivory illusion fell from a coronet of pearls caught in back with a band of orange blossoms and her only jewelry was an heirloom necklace which had belonged to her maternal great-grandmother. She carried a round bouquet of gardenias, lilies of the valley and white sweet peas.

Bridegroom's Sister Is Matron of Honor

Mrs. Frederick H. Warren, of Washington, sister of the bridegroom, was matron of honor, and Miss Sherrod Murrey, the bride's sister, was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Marie Murrey, of Gallatin, Tenn.; Miss Waverly Murrey, Miss Miriam Lusby and Mrs. Richard Miller. They wore frocks of marquisette, with top knots of spring flowers in their hair, and carried bouquets of tulips, snapdragons, larkspur, daisies, and other flowers. The dresses worn by the matron and maid of honor were of an aqua shade, trimmed with maize velvet ribbon, and the bridesmaids frocks were maize colored trimmed with the aqua ribbon.

George Benton, of Jackson, Tenn., was best man, and the ushers were Frederick H. Warren and Carter Fort, of Washington; Frank Erskine, of New Orleans; Lieut. John Walker, of Galveston, Tex.; Hunter Taylor, of Jackson, Tenn., and Charles Marquardt, of Washington.

Anne Norris Shires, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ira Shires, was flower girl, wearing a dress like that of the bridesmaids, in the same shades, and carrying mixed spring flowers. Harwell Murrey, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Murrey was ring bearer.

Couple to Make Home In Philadelphia

A reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Murrey on Murrey Hill followed the ceremony. White roses, tulips and snapdragons decorated the rooms, and the dining-room table was covered with an imported lace cloth and silver candelabra bearing white tapers. Mrs. Murrey wore a gown of hyacinth blue trimmed with Chantilly lace, and a corsage of pink roses and sweet peas. Mrs. McIntyre was in lavender lace, trimmed with coral ruching. A corsage of talisman roses topped off her costume.

When she left for her wedding trip the bride wore a Patou suit of creamy beige, with a top coat trimmed in natural fox fur. After a trip by motoar to the Grove Park Inn in Asheville, N. C., the couple will live in Philadelphia.

The bride attended the Ward-Belmont School and was graduated from Vanderbilt University, where she was a member of Alpha Omicron Pi Sorority. Mr. McIntyre attended St. Alban's School in Washington and was graduated from the Fork Union Military Academy in Virginia. He also attended Vanderbilt University, where he was a member of Sigma Chi fraternity.

The bridegroom's father, who is secretary to President Roosevelt, was also present at the wedding.

Charming, flattering for women and misses. Exciting interpretations on the Third Floor include a most unusual model with white eyelet embroidery bodice, Paris-inspired with long sleeves, in dramatic contrast to the beautifully designed, sheath-like skirt. A gown, indeed, for the smart individualist . . . one-of-many exclusively styled lace gowns for wear now.

Mrs. Frederick M. Kerby Heads Chevy Chase Club

Succeeds Mrs. Joseph Maguire Who Had Served Woman's Organization for Two Years

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor

Mrs. Frederick M. Kerby was unanimously elected president of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase yesterday to succeed Mrs. Joseph Travers Maguire, who had served for the last two years. The slate, presented by the nominating committee headed by Mrs. Karl Fenning, went through without change at the monthly meeting at the clubhouse, on Connecticut avenue.

Mrs. Kerby was chairman of the $8,500 committee which raised the money for the building fund that made it possible to break ground for the clubhouse a year ago in May. She also was treasurer of the building company and has been an active member of the club since 1925.

Other officers include Mrs. Henry DeCoursey Adams, retiring chairman of the art section, first vice president; Mrs. Arthur T. Davenport, retiring chairman of the drama section, second vice president; Mrs. F. S. Brackett, retiring chairman of the French section, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Philip P. Gott, re-elected as recording secretary; Mrs. Louis S. Murphy re-elected treasurer, and Mrs. Roy J. Joroleman, re-elected assistant treasurer.

Club Starts Paying Off Debt

It was announced that $2,500 will be paid off the indebtedness on the clubhouse in May. This amount has come from increased revenue through growth in membership as well as from rentals of the clubhouse, which is in constant demand as a meeting place for other organizations, when not in use by the club.

Mrs. Frederick E. Shoemaker, chairman of membership, proposed a resolution, which was adopted, to limit the membership to 800. The Maryland-Chevy Chase geographical chart is to be used to define the area from which members are eligible.

Mrs. Thomas E. Robertson made a motion that names on the waiting list should not be acted upon until the May meeting.

Scholarships Are To Be Awarded

Mrs. Douglas Griesemer, chairman of education, announced plans to award a scholarship of $250 to a first-year college student, and one of $150 to a student of any year in a recognized college. Daughters of club members and other girls within the club area may apply for the scholarships. The club also donated $56 for two pages in the program of the Montgomery Hospital dinner, to be given in July. This will go to the fund for the new emergency room in the hospital.

The annual concert, sponsored by the music section, open to all members and their friends without charge, was announced by Mrs. William Collins, chairman, for Wednesday night, May 3, and the musicale, tea and fashion show, which will be a benefit, for May 8.

A resolution urging the passage of the bill now in Congress for the preservation of Decatur House was passed by the club.

2 Students in Charge Of Display at Constitution Hall

Evidence of the value of the D. A. R.-approved schools is offered to members of the society in the exhibits in the lounge of Constitution Hall and the young students who are there to tell of their work.

Alice Ayers and Ovelle Mayhall were in charge of the exhibit from Kate Duncan Smith School in Alabama yesterday afternoon. Ovelle, whose home is a great distance from the school, lives with the home economics teacher at the Ann Rogers Minor practice cottage (named for Mrs. George Maynard Minor, to whom the tablet in Memorial Continental Hall was dedicated Saturday). A group of four girls of the senior home economics class lives at the cottage each month taking turns as housekeeper, hostess, waitress and chief cook.

The school, which has 500 students, boys and girls, covers 12 grades. The boys learn agriculture and will have a model farm next year, property for which was given by the Indiana Daughters.

Their exhibit included doormats made of cornhusks, clothing towels and table covers made in attractive styles from sugar, flour, fertilizer, and tobacco sacks, and a crocheted table mat from the ravelings of fertilizer sacks.

Crossnore School in North Carolina had a large number of woven articles for sale. Mrs. N. W. Johnson, head of the weaving department, and Elva Stout, a graduate were in charge.

Eight boys and girls from the Crossnore School were invited to sing mountain ballads at St. Alban's School yesterday and then were taken on a tour of the cathedral.

They accompanied Dr. Mary Martin Sloop to the continental congress. Dr. Sloop declared the school never has had a graduate "who was a failure, if we recommended him." Her pupils, she said, run from "six years to 6 feet."

Doings of The Daughters

Sidelights of the D. A. R. Congress.

IN A SURPRISE auction that lasted for 20 minutes and brought in pledges of $25,000, Mrs. Russell William Magna, honorary president general, took the D. A. R. stage yesterday to raise funds for a new archives room in Constitution Hall.

Two $1,000 subscriptions for arch alcoves came in quickly from Ohio and Pennsylvania. Twelve State hurriedly promised $250 each for document sections, seven States said they would gove $200 each for record stacks, twelve States "bought" the ceiling and floor, two pledged for the walls, two more for chair railings—and on until the room was assured, even to air conditioning.

ELIZABETH MORRIS, of Cleveland Heights, Ohio, chief of the pages for the Congress, has 20 hours of solo flying to her credit. Miss Morris has been devoting her time during the past year to taking a medical assistant's course, but hopes soon to resume her flying.

Aviation is not a fad with the girls, who take it up, she says. "A plane is a means of transportation and of enjoyment, just as an automobile is and that's why I like flying."

Miss Morris, tall, blonde and athletic, also likes camping in the north woods.

THE LEADERS of the service bands playing for the congress have received special recognition this year. Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., the president general, has introduced each one and expressed the D. A. R.'s appreciation of the music.

MRS. JAMES SHERA MONTGOMERY, member of Livingston Manor Chapter of the District D. A. R., is serving as organist of the Congress for the twelfth consecutive year.

MRS. EFFIE GWYNN BOWIE, of Upper Marlboro, artist and geneologist, of local reputation, has a concession in the lounge of Constitution Hall for the tenth season. Mrs. Bowie, in addition to being an active member of the D. A. R., belongs to the Maryland Historical Society and the National Geneological Society.

MEMBERS of the Oklahoma Society, D. A. R., claim the honor of having placed a box of the society records at one of the northernmost points in America. They sent a box to Point Barrow, Alaska, to be put in the monument erected there last summer in memory of Will Rogers and Wiley Post.

John Kayser, son of Mrs. Jesse W. Kayser, State regent, who took the box to Point Barrow, has been here for the past few days with his mother, who is attending the Congress.

COMMUNITY SINGING was led last night between State regents' reports by Mrs. Harold Brooks Gardner, of New Rochelle, N. Y., State chairman of the Advancement of American Music Committee. During the World War, Mrs. Gardner was with the entertainment service overseas and knows how to make other people sing with the same enthusiasm that she does.

ANOTHER BELL will be added to the Washington National Memorial Carillon, at Valley Forge Sunday when the Vermont Daughters go there to dedicate their gift. Two other new bells presented this spring were those of the South Carolina and Nebraska Daughters, both dedicated in ceremonies Thursday of last week. Texas gave a large bell last spring, making four which have been presented during Mrs. Robert's administration.

D. A. R.'s from overseas will lunch together today at 1 p. m. in the private dining room at Woodward & Lothrop's, with delegates present from China, Germany, Panama, England, France and the Philippines.

Mrs. William A. Becker, honorary president general, will be a guest. Mrs. Donald Baker, of Panama, is committee arrangements chairman.

THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA flag has joined those of the 48 States and will have a place in Continental Memorial Hall, it was announced to the D. A. R.'s yesterday. The D. C. emblem has been presented by Mrs. Howard L. Hodgkins.

SEVERAL D. A. R. delegates yesterday had copies of "China" tucked under their arms. It's the name of a new song by Mrs. Bessie Moore Churchill, wife of the commander of Langley Field, Va., and regent of Hampton Chapter.

It's written in swingtime, the orchestras are taking it up, and all proceeds will go to the Chinese relief fund and the Red Cross.

Expert Sets Fair Value for 2 Gas Plants

Alexandria, Hyattsville Companies Held Worth $1,300,000-$1,550,000

A fair value for the purchase of securities of the Hyattsville and Alexandria gas companies should range between $1,300,000 and $1,550,000, it was testified yesterday before the Public Utilities Commission.

The commission, which yesterday completed its third day of public hearings on the petition by the Washington Gas Light Co. to buy the two nearby firms, was told the "spread" in prices was necessary in any transaction between buyer and seller.

C. F. Elmes, a New York engineering consultant who made the testimony, appeared at the hearing upon request of the Washington & Suburban Cos., a Massachusetts common-law trust which owns the three utilities involved in the petition.

8 Different "Fair Values"

All told, Elmes produced eight different "fair values," based on ratios he said were in general use in the purchase of gas companies.

In its application to acquire the properties of the two suburban subsidiaries, the Washington company has offered its parent, the Massachusetts trust, 12,255 shares of preferred stock valued at some $1,250,000.

Ratios used by the New York consultant involved the total derived by tripling the forecasted gross revenue, multiplying by ten the actual earnings for 12 months; ten times the forecasted net earnings for 1939; approximate bare physical valuation, less depreciation, and placing a $100 value per customer plus the minimum reproduction cost depreciated of generating plant.

Combined Values Estimated

The values of the two companies combined under these methods of calculation ranged from $1,322,000 to $1,794,000. He said the actual cost of the two companies would be somewhere between the minimum of $1,300,000 and the maximum of $1,550,000.

The consultant said it would be to the advantage of the local company to purchase the Alexandria and Hyattsville companies, which he described as "thriving communities."

Suburban dwellers were better "gas users" than city apartment "dwellers," Elmes stated. He pointed out that the nearby companies would bring in a "good" rate of return on the investment.

'Quiet,' Court Tells Leader Of Neighborhood Dog Chorus

Mongrels of Crescent Place May Be Looking for a New Basso as Citizens Get Injunction; Mistress Fined $10

Injunction against the barking and yowling of Sandy, Airedale-police dog, was obtained from Police Court Judge Edward M. Curran yesterday by the prominent residents of 1661 Crescent place northwest.

Sandy's barking cost his mistress, Mrs. Elizabeth Baker, colored, of 2323 Seventeenth street northwest, $10 as a fine. She was found guilty of allowing her dog to disturb the peace.

Admiral Frederick J. Horne and Maj. Carroll W. Dunning, retired, were the principal witnesses against the 2-year-old canine basso.

With typical naval precision, Admiral Horne told the court the dog had barked on 10 days since April 4. He even gave Judge Curran the time to the minutes of Sandy's offenses.

"He seems to be a leader of a neighborhood chorus," Horne testified.

Maj. Dunning, executive assistant to Social Security Board, related that the dog's howls awakened him and his wife at 7 a. m. yesterday.

"He howls while we're eating meals and early in the morning," the major said.

Mrs. Corrine R. Curtis corroborated the testimony of the two officers.

U. S. to Publish Operating Statistics of Large Utilities

By the Associated Press.

John W. Scott, Federal power commissioner, said yesterday the Administration planned to make public soon the financial and operating statistics of every large public utility in the country.

The purpose, he told members of the Federal Bar Association, was to speed up regulatory and corrective measures designed to increase distribution of low cost public utility services and to strengthen national defense.

"There can be no doubt," he said, "that the nation which has an abundance of low cost public utility services has an economic advantage, and at the same time, possesses great weapons of national defense."

A serious obstacle to the prospect, he said, was possible treatment of the regulatory process by the courts.

"If the so-called fair value theory of rate making," he explained, "is to include consideration of the cost of reproduction (of facilities), then long, expensive conjecture, speculation and guessing will be inevitable.

"The Federal Power Commission on two occasions has urged the Supreme Court to permit in its stead the use of the prudent investment theory."

Scott said that in making the data public the commission hoped to correct "certain abuses" such as inflated capital structure both in securities and in plant investment. For many years, he charged, electric and gas utilities have followed haphazard and promiscuous methods of setting up depreciation reserves.

"The monopoly profit motive is so generally opposed to the public interests," he said, "that there is no recourse but governmental action.

"Where private capital is unwilling or unable to make adequate utility services generally available, it is the responsibility of government to satisfy the need directly."

Scott Discusses Power Commission At Bar Luncheon

Wider use of electricity at lower cost is the key to a higher standard of living, John W. Scott, of the Federal Power Commission, told the Federal Bar Association at a luncheon in the National Press Club yesterday.

Scott discussed the powers and activities of the commission, and the legislation on which it is based.

William E. Morell, of the Board of Veterans Appeals, presided at the luncheon.

The depression in the ocean's floor was recorded by means of a sonic, or echo, depth finder on February 14 by the cruiser Milwaukee.

Milk Inquiry To Include D. C. Dairies

Sub-Committee Names Burroughs Special Counsel For Investigation

Operations of the local dairies will be included in the scope of the House milk investigation, Chairman Bates, of the sub-committee on public health, disclosed yesterday after J. Edward Burroughs, Washington lawyer, had been chosen special counsel for the inquiry.

"It is my understanding of the resolution," Bates said, "that the sub-committee is directed to go into the distribution as well as the production end of the milk business."

Hearings Next Week

Public hearings probably will start early next week, Bates said, but the procedure will be decided tomorrow when the sub-committee holds another executive meeting to select an investigator and minor personnel.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland will be one of the first witnesses to be called, Bates said.

Burroughs was the unanimous choice of the sub-committee. Although the members had numerous applicants, he did not seek the job, Bates said, and was considered unbiased.

The attorney is a member of the Washington law firm of Homer S. Cummings, former Attorney General, and William S. Stanley, former Assistant Attorney General. He will take a leave of absence during the milk investigation.

Burroughs, a native of La Plata, Md., and a graduate of the University of Maryland and the Georgetown Law School, has been a local resident about 15 years.

Limited to District

Despite the suggestion of members of the House District Committee that the sub-committee carry its investigation into the Middle West, the source of the "bootleg" cream, Bates said he saw no necessity for the members leaving Washington. Any witnesses from other States that are needed, he said, can be summoned to the District.

The investigation is not expected to contiuue more than six weeks or two months as the sub-committee had been alloted only $2,500 by the House.

He came to Washington in 1924 as special trial counsel of the Federal Trade Commission and three years later entered private legal practice here. An episcopalian, he was a member of the Chevy Chase and University Clubs here and the Yale Clubs of New York.

Funeral services and interment will be in Clarksburg.

Life Begins at 70 - - - - - - -

EDWARD H. TOMPKINS

(This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding so-called "old-age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are—Editor's note.)

By Gerald G. Gross.

"There is too much of a tendency among persons reaching a certain age to persuade themselves that they have reached the last page of the book of life," says the United States Public Health Service. "At this point, they seem to think that both mental and physical activities should be relinquished. The contrary viewpoint should hold. Efforts should be made to preserve such an equanimity of mind and purpose that old age will become a period of comfort and enjoyment. Old age should be a physiological change of not unpleasant nature."

All of which brings to mind Edward H. Tompkins, 83 last January. He is today's "Exhibit A" in support of the Health Service's contention.

Starting out in 1892, he was in business in Washington for 40 years. Tinning, heating and plumbing was his line. When he retired a few years ago the last thought that would have entered his head was that he had "reached the last page of the book of life."

Still he was faced with the problem of finding something to do. For a time he conducted a little store at Patuxent Beach, near Solomon's Island. But, somehow, that wasn't in his groove. He gave up the shop and took turns staying with his children. He has three sons and three daughters. One son is Charles H. Tompkins, the building contractor.

"But they refused to let me do anything," Mr. Tompkins said yesterday. "They wouldn't even let me get up to fetch myself a drink of water. I began to get soft."

The years slipped by and a septuagenarian became an octogenarian, chafing at his idleness. Then a year ago he found himself, when he went to live with his son, E. Wesley Tompkins, in the latter's new home near Norbeck, Md.

"Wesley had just taken to raising rabbits," said the father, "and he invited me to help out, if I cared to. Well, I certainly did care to."

As he spoke he continued cleaning out the two neat rows of rabbit pens in the rear of the residence, a task which had been temporarily interrupted by the arrival of this department. Mr. Tompkins yesterday had a dozen adults in his care and about the same number of young ones.

He said it keeps him busy the greater part of the day cleaning the cages, feeding and watering. Whatever time is left is devoted to caring for the house and grounds while his son is running a filling station at Wheaton, Md., and the daughter-in-law is teaching school in Washington.

There is no doubt whatever in Mr. Tompkins' mind that he's found himself at last.

"I feel far better now than I did when I retired," he says. "After a hard day's work I sleep like a kitten. I can eat anything."

He would like to cut the grass and do some of the more strenuous work about the place, but his son won't let him. The rabbits are a paying hobby, too. Easter bunny sales were so good that every available one was grabbed up, said their custodian.

Keep Medicine Free of False Gods, Mallory Urges Doctors

Advancement of the medical profession if it co-ordinates the life sciences and is not "as in some places, prostituted to the propagation of false philosophy and twisted biology for the promotion of primitive, selfish, political aims," was predicted by Dr. William J. Mallory, in his presidential address before the District Medical Society last night.

Besides this reference, which was considered to be a slap at the German race theory, Dr. Mallory took several digs at "mercy deaths."

Reviewing the activities for which the medical man is responsible, the society president reminded his hearers they are "requested to see that man is well bred, safely born and happily reared. Man's food must be inspected and his diet balanced. He must be immunized, protected against rickets and other avitaminoses; his tonsils removed, his teeth replaced, and lenses fitted to his myopic eyes . . .

"If he slays his neighbor, he must be psychoanalyzed before it can be determined to what prison, or rather to what country club or Government institution of mental and moral rehabilitation he is to be assigned for medical treatment by a skilled staff, who may or may not sterilize him.

"This product of your hands should be so vigorous at the age of 96 that when he gazes at the daughters of Eve he should not have to make the vain wish that he were again only 70 . . ."

Finally, Dr. Mallory said, when the doctor can no longer prolong man's life, he must certify his death, "whether from natural causes or, perhaps, a mercy death in the interest of the heirs to his estate . . . and when musical has been asked to sing at the funeral."

He ended by suggesting a new name for doctors—"homoculturists, because you cultivate man from ovum to octogenarian."

Curley Asks Charity From The Heart

Prelate, Addressing Christ Child Society, Lauds Its Founder, Miss Mary Merrick

A plea for "more charity from the heart" was voiced here last night by Archbishop Michael J. Curley, of Baltimore, addressing more than 400 members of the Chirst Child Society of Washington.

Speaking at the Raleigh Hotel, the prelate lauded the work of the society and its "guiding genius," Miss Mary V. Merrick, who founded the organization in 1886, and, although crippled since the age of 18, still supervises its activities from her home in Chevy Chase.

Speaking in place of Miss Merrick, who has been honored by the Vatican, the National Council of Catholic Women and scores of other groups, Mrs. James A. Emery, first vice president of the society, briefly described the year's progress, also sketched by members of the Blackfriars' Guild in a play entitled "There Is a Need."

Miss Merrick is also president of the National Christ Child Society, with branches in 31 cities, as well as in eight convents and in colleges. National organization came in 1905. The national convention will be held in Omaha, Nebr., May 3 and 4.

The statistical report revealed, among other things, that 178,831 boys and girls attended the Christ Child Settlement House in 1938; that 12,530 days' care were given children in the Christ Child Convalescent Home, and that in the dental clinic 2,641 visits were made, with 945 patients treated.

According to the report, 2,463 families were aided by the society during the 1938 period; 3,783 individuals were helped, 2,091 gifts to the "forgotten child" were made at Christmas, 481 children were taken to summer camps.

Another feature of the meeting was the showing of films of the Merrick Boys Club of the Christ Child House depicting activities at their summer camp at Maryland Point, about 50 miles from here. Frederick Altemus, president of the Merrick Club, presided and spoke briefly.

The board of managers of the Merrick Boys Camp acted as guard of honor to Archbishop Curley, while Scout troops of the Christ Child House served as assistant guard of honor.

Axis Placed On Defensive, Exile Asserts

Roosevelt's Peace Message Responsible, Eva Lips Tells 1,000

As a result of President Roosevelt's peace message, Adolf Hitler and "his twin brother of the axis" are for the first time on the defensive, Eva Lips, exiled German writer, told more than 1,000 persons at the Jewish Community Center last night.

Author of "Savage Symphony," a bitter indictment of the Nazi regime, from which she and her husband were forced to flee, Mrs. Lips spoke under the sponsorship of Argo Lodge of B'nai B'rith, the lodge's auxiliary, and the Washington chapter of Hadassah. Her subject was "The Decline of German Civilization—A Menace to World Democracy."

Vigilance against infiltration of Nazi propaganda was urged by the speaker, whose husband resigned as professor of anthropology at the University of Cologne in protest over Nazi racial theories.

"Hitler wants to conquer the world, by the same means he so successfully used against the German people—through lies, broken promises, and threats," she said. "President Roosevelt has called 'halt' . . . The suppressed German people, too, have heard his voice."

Mrs. Morris Cafritz presided.

Fifty-six veterans of the Spanish-American War gathered last night for a "muster-in" celebration at the Pythian Temple to commemorate the entrance of this country into the war, April 21, 1898, and to recall the old days in Cuba and the Philippines.

Among the speakers were Col. E. C. Johnson, United States Army, retired, a member of the Forty-ninth Iowa Volunteers in the Spanish War, and Col. S. J. McWilliams, Army Reserve Corps. The veterans were reminded they were members of this country's only volunteer army.

D.A.R. Hall Sought Again for Singer

S. Hurok, manager of Marian Anderson, yesterday telegraphed Mrs. Henry M. Robert, jr., president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, requesting any one of 15 dates next November for her to sing in Constitution Hall, it was announced last night by Gerald Goode, press representative.

"I am herewith requesting that your board be called upon to reconsider its decision which by a ballot vote prohibited Marian Anderson from appearing at Constitution Hall this month despite the fact that your auditorium was available to white artists on April 8 and April 10," Hurok wired. He applied for any evening from November 15 to November 27, or the Sunday afternoons of November 19 or 26.

He stated this permitted "15 separate opportunities to reaffirm a vital principle of American democracy, which must be more profoundly regarded than the rules, customs, or practices to which you have referred in your public statement of April 18."

Charles H. Houston, chairman, and John Lovell, jr., secretary of the Marian Anderson Citizens Committee, yesterday reported they had sent a day letter to Mrs. Robert, asking whether she would appoint a committee to receive a delegation "regarding a ban" on colored artists at Constitution Hall.

Monroe Policy Still Vital, Gillette Says

Senator Addresses Society of Virginia At Birthday Fete

The Monroe Doctrine is as vital today as when it was written, Senator Guy M. Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, told the Society of Virginia last night, at a meeting in the Willard Hotel in commemoration of the birthdays of Monroe and Jefferson.

"Its added power and significance are strikingly obvious in the light of present-day conditions," he said, pointing out that President Roosevelt had reiterated the principles of the doctrine in his Pan-American day celebration that the American republics would "match force to force" in defense of their institutions.

The President was also following the doctrine in making it clear that his role in European affairs is that of intermediary, the Senator continued, referring to the President's message to Hitler and Mussolini last Friday.

Senator Gillette recounted how the public careers of Jefferson and Monroe were intertwined, and quoted Jeffereson as calling the doctrine "the most momentous (question) that has ever been offered to my contemplation since that of independence."

The Senator was introduced by Col. Edwin A. Halsey, president of the society.

Arms Best Bar to War, Says Gen. Cox

And Only Insurance If Conflict Comes, Guard Chief Tells Sons of Revolution

Armaments, provided in time of peace, are the best assurance that this country will stay out of war, Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the District National Guard, last night told the District Society of the Sons of the American Revolution.

Military preparedness "constitutes the best assurance against war which has yet been devised and if war finally comes, it affords the only means of safeguarding the national interest and bringing a return of the Nation into a safe way of peace," he said at the annual meeting in the Mayflower Hotel.

"We will continue," he said, "the wise traditional policy of keeping out of European as well as Asiatic messes. We shall interfere with no government elsewhere, but let us be determined that no government elsewhere shall interfere with ours. . . . We must not allow ourselves to be lulled into defenselessness by honeyed phrases or sanctimonious platitudes."

Officers elected at the meeting were Chalmers S. McConnell, president; C. Leonard Brown, senior vice president; Laurence V. Benet, second vice president; Frank T. Tracy, third vice president; W. 'White Collar' Exemption to Be in Pay Bill

Labor Committee Has Yet to Decide On Farm Workers

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Norton (Democrat), New Jersey, said yesterday the House Labor Committee had approved tentatively all the amendments she has proposed to the wage-hour law except one dealing with agricultural workers.

After a two-hour session behind closed doors, Mrs. Norton told reporters the amendments were in essentially the same form as they were when she introduced them several weeks ago.

The section proposing to exempt so-called "white collar" workers earning $200 a month or more, she said, remains unchanged.

Committee to Vote Monday

The committee has agreed to begin consideration of the agricultural amendment Friday and to vote on the entire group of amendments next Monday. The agricultural amendment would exempt specifically certain agricultural operations.

Meanwhile, Elmer F. Andrews, Wage-Hour Administrator, issued a new definition of area of production to provide for the exemption of certain employes of the fresh fruit and vegetable industry from the act.

The new definition, he said in a statement, "exempts employes engaged in the canning, packing and storing of fresh fruits and vegetables who are employed in establishments situated in the open country or in towns of less than 2,500, and which draw all their products from within a radius of 10 miles."

Original Definition Reversed

The Administrator's original definition exempted an employe engaged in packing, canning and storing fruits and vegetables only if he performed such work on a farm on commodities produced exclusively on such farm, or worked for an establishment which obtained its products for processing from farms in the immediate locality and employed no more than seven persons.

The fruit-and-vegetable industry attacked the original definition as too narrow and restricted.

President Roosevelt asked Congress yesterday for an additional $100,000 to run the Wage-and-Hour Administration for the remainder of the fiscal year, which ends June 30.

Dorothea Lamore Is Early Entry In 'Beauty With Brains' Contest

Preliminary Judging Will Be Done From Photographs

Miss Dorothea Lamore, of 2400 Twentieth street northwest, and no relation to the girl with the sarong, is one of the early entrants in the "Beauty With Brains" contest sponsored by the A. F. G. E. and The Washington Post and open to all Government girls in Washington and vicinity. Miss Lamore works in the Interior Department.

Her entry illustrates an important point, that either snapshots or portrait photographs may be entered. Either will be perfectly satisfactory, so long as you feel the picture does you justice.

The preliminary judging will be done from the photographs. Those passing this test and entering into the semifinals will appear on the stage of Loew's Capitol Theater, and from their ranks the judges will select six as being the most beautiful. The judges are Senator Tydings, Representative Jennings Randolph and another surprise judge to be announced soon.

The six who win the judges' approval for beauty will then take the test for brains by appearing on The Post's Umbrella Court program. The one making the highest score on the Umbrella Court quiz will be the winner of the contest. Her rewards will include a loving cup, the gift of The Post, and an all-expense trip to the New York World's Fair, the trip being contributed by the A. F. G. E. which is sponsoring Government Employees Day at the fair.

The contest started last Monday. Entries may be made until and including May 5. They should be addressed to the Contest Editor, The Washington Post. All Government women in Washington and vicinity are eligible. Send in your entry now.

All you need to do to enter the contest is (1) pick out the best looking picture of yourself, whether snapshot or cabinet photo, (2) write your name, address and Government bureau on the back, (3) fill out an entry blank, using the coupon in The Post or one obtained at The Post's front counter, 1337 E street northwest, (4) attach the entry blank to the picture, (5) bring or mail it to The Post, (6) sit back and hope you are one of the 25 who will get into the semifinals.

15 Bishops Pray For Success of Roosevelt Plea

Prelates, Meeting Here, Hope Peace Can Be Retained in Parleys

Fifteen Catholic bishops yesterday offered the "prayerful hope" that President Roosevelt's plea for world peace and discussion of problems at the conference table would be successful.

The bishops, who met here for the semiannual session of the National Catholic Welfare Conference administrative board, urged "common sacrifices for the common weal generously made" and hoped "lasting peace" would be established.

The prelates quoted Pope Pius XII's Easter statement: "How may peace be had if among nations there is lacking the mutual understanding which alone can encourage and impel people along luminous ways of civil progress, and if solemnly sanctioned pacts and the plighted word has lost that security and value which are the principal bases of reciprocal confidence and without which ardently desired disarmament, material and moral, becomes with each passing day less possible of realization?"

The board of bishops warned against interpretating that American peace offer as a surrender by the United States "to those who would embroil us in alien conflicts and dissensions."

The hope was indorsed by Archbishop Edward Mooney, Detroit, chairman; Samuel A. Stritch, Milwaukee; Joseph F. Rummel, New Orleans; John Gregory Murray, St. Paul; Bishops John B. Peterson, Manchester, N. H.; John A. Duffy, Buffalo; Francis C. Kelley, Oklahoma City and Tulsa; Hugh C. Boyle, Pittsburgh; Edwin V. O'Hara, Kansas City; John Mark Gannon, Erie, Pa.; Francis C. Keough, Providence; Bartholomew J. Eustace, Camden; Emmet M. Walsh, Charleston, S. C.; Karl J. Alter, Toledo; Walter A. Foery, Syracuse.

Two Firms Are Cited as Nitrate Trusts

The Federal Trade Commission yesterday announced it had issued complaints against the Chilean Nitrate Sales Corporation and the Barrett Co., both of New York, charging violations of the Federal trade and Robinson-Patman acts.

The companies were accused of monopolizing the supply and distribution of raw or basic nitrate of soda sold in the United States.

Chilean Nitrate imports its product from Chile while the Barrett Co.'s product is manufactured at Hopewell, Va.

The complaint charged them with entering into agreements the effect of which was to monopolize the sale and distribution of their products by fixing prices at which both bulk and bagged nitrate of soda should be sold to distributors and fertilizer manufacturers and resold to dealers and consumers.

The commission asserted the two firms "investigated alleged violations of contracts and agreements and by threats and coercive means compelled recalcitrants as well as all other distributors and dealers to comply with and adhere to the terms of the contracts, agreements and policies, all in violation of the Federal trade commission act."

The two firms were accused of violating the Robinson-Patman act by a system of rebates ranging from 25 cents to $1 a ton.

D. C. Sees First Eclipse in 4 Years; No One Excited

Washington yesterday viewed its first eclipse of the sun since 1935, but no one got particularly excited about it.

Main reason was the fact that the day was cloudy, especially during the late forenoon when the eclipse was in progress, and visibility was poor. It began at 10:51 a. m. locally and ended at 12:31 p. m.

Besides, it was not a total eclipse, and in this instance, only one-seventh of the sun was hidden by the moon at the maximum.

The unfavorable weather resulted in the Naval Observatory's making only 19 pictures with the photoheliograph, whereas it had hoped to take 50 or more. These photographs, explained Astronomer J. E. Willis, will be useful in checking the rotation speeds of earth and moon.

Every year has at least two solar eclipses and may have as many as five, Willis said. Washington will see its next—weather permitting—on April 7, 1940.

Health Education, Not Treatment, Held Schools' Aim

Health education rather than medical service should be the principal aim of an effective school health program, Dr. Don W. Gudakunst, Michigan State Health Commissioner, told the Council of Social Agencies health committee yesterday at the Young Men's Christian Association. Dr. Gudakunst was formerly school health director of Detroit, Mich.

Parents should be taught to have their children vaccinated in infancy, Dr. Gudakunst said. Too much medical service in the schools discourage parents from taking proper initiative in caring for their children, he added.

Dr. Gudakunst was introduced by Dr. Joseph Murphy, director of school medical inspection, District of Columbia Health Department. Willard C. Smith, chairman of the Health committee of the council, presided.

Bees Beat Phils on Simmons' Single in 12th

SPORTS The Washington Post SPORTS

*X THURSDAY, APRIL 20, 1939 19

Brown Sets Record in Boston Marathon

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Philadelphia, Pa., April 19.—"We will not miss Bonura and Simmons."—Clark Griffith.

That was one of the psime utterances of the Washington owner during spring training. He steadfastly maintained that Zeke Bonura and Al Simmons, though departed from the Nats, had left no vacancies. Washington didn't need 'em. But 24 hours after the opening of the season by the Bees and Giants, Griffith's comment anent Bonura and Simmons seemingly deserves rank with such classic quotations as "They can't put you in jail for that" and "The horseless carriage is just a passing fad." For which an adequate answer has always been "Oh, yeah?"

POVICH

Perhaps the recent news from the Polo Grounds and Bees Field has been very distressing to Mr. Griffith. What did Bonura do in his second time at bat for the Giants but hit a home run with two on base to win the game for the Giants. And what did Al Simmons do in his first game for the Bees today but slam out three hits in seven times at bat and break up the ball game with a single in the twelfth inning.

May Do Well Against N. L. Pitching

Be it remembered that Griffith sold Simmons to the Bees for $3,000, a figure $4,500 beneath the waiver price, and that he sold Bonura to the Giants for $25,000 and a pair of ball players who are still very much in the minor leagues. He sold 'em because he said the Nats didn't need 'em. Apparently the rest of the American League didn't need 'em either, because both players were waivd out of th league without much difficulty.

There is a chance, though, that Mr. Griffith is not particularly disturbed by the opening-game performances of Bonura and Simmons in the National League. And if their National League managers were to listen to Griffith they would not place too much faith in the pair. Because Griffith could tell them, for example, that Bonura hit a home run in his first game for the Nats and that from that date he was a distinct liability. He could tell them, too, that it was Simmons' habit to rise to the opening-game occasion and then go into a disastrous slump.

It is significant that all the American League club owners concurred with Griffith when they waived the pair out of the league and were content to see them go to the National. The fact is that whereas they were not highly regarded as American Leaguers, they may do very well in the National.

They may do very well at bat, particularly, because it is a different type of pitching that they will face as a rule in the National League where the emphasis is on curve balls, Simmons, particularly. Simmons, now 37, showed no liking for fast-ball pitching in his late season in the American League. Pitches that he used to murder were actually being thrown past him by American League hurlers with a fast ball. With advancing age had come to Simmons an inability to swing his bat with the same quick wrist-action necessary to hit fast-ball pitching. Against the slower curves he still hits well.

Always Threat for Double Play

Bonura still likes fast-ball pitching but in the National League he will see little of it. Will he hit enough against curve balls to offset his horrible deficiency in the field? It is no secret that Big Zeke is simply a bad first baseman. Unless he continues to hit for the Giants, Bill Terry is not expected to put up with him. Himself a great defensive first baseman in his time, Terry is apt to register great horror when he sees Bonura unable even to bend for balls that, for Terry, would have been easy chances.

This department, in fact, agrees with Griffith and Manager Bucky Harris that the departure of both Simmons and Bonura is no great loss to the Nats—despite their record of having driven in 213 of the Washington runs last season. The Nats are rid, at least, of two potent double-play threats. Any time Simmons or Big Zeke hit a ground ball with a man on first base, it was virtually a certain double play. The big fellows couldn't move to first fast enough.

Sure they batted in 213 runs, but what of it. It is only a slight exaggeration to point out that your Aunt Kate could have batted in 213 runs for he Nats last season if she had been batting third and fourth in the Washington batting order as Simmons and Bonura were.

No club in the league had as many men on base ahead of their clean-up hitters as did the Nats of last season. Seemingly George Case and Buddy Lewis were always on the base-paths when Simmons and Bonura strode to the plate. That pair should have driven in 300 runs. If at the end of the 1939 season, Bobby Estalella and Taft Wright, the third and fourth-place hitters for the Nats this year, do not produce more runs than did Simmons and Bonura, we waive all immunity. You can sue us.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, April 19.—Miraculously, the pulse has come back to the loose and hairy arm of Lefty Grove. Nobody knows why it left and nobody quite expected it to come back. But it did.

"I was sitting in the dugout at Sarasota watching him pitch to the Reds," Joe Cronin was telling us today, as he mournfully regarded the rain dripping down his hotel window. "Well, for one inning he wasn't too hot, but for the second and third he was the old Grove. He was pouring it through there like hot grease and making them look bad.

CONSIDINE

"So when he came in after the third I said, 'Hell, Lefty, you're okay again. Get ready to pitch that opener.' And he said, 'It is okay. I'll be ready.'"

Anybody who knows Grove knows he doesn't kid himself. Old ball players are the last to admit they are slipping, but Grove is a kind of exception to this. He knew he was about cooked last year, when suddenly, and at a time when he was pitching some of the greatest baseball of a great career, all feeling went out of his arm. The flap actually cooled off a couple of degrees, turned a paler shade, and no amount of medical instruments could detect the faintest pulse beneath his armpit, around his elbow or his wrist.

The doctors looked for a pinched nerve. They tapped him here and there for possible logs that were blocking his blood streams leading into his left arm. They massaged it until it was raw, and baked it until it needed basting. But it hung there in suspended animation, not precisely dead, but certainly not living.

A Much-Operated Gentleman

They would have done more work on him, in a surgical way, but Lefty is so hollow now that whenever he eats salted peanuts and runs out a basehit he sounds like a rhumba gourd. He came to the Red Sox with a painfully sore arm in 1934, and in an effort to cure it the docs divorced him from half his teeth, his tonsils, adenoids and were just about to rummage through his abdomen when Roland Logan, the Red Sox trainer, chased the pain out of his bicep with a little hocus pocus of the fingers.

But until the pain went Grove was a haunted man. We used to see him sitting on the front porches of the various players' hotels, rocking back and forth, and wanting only to be left alone. When the arm first went bad that time he couldn't even tell where the pain was. It was like a small and evil cloud that sailed up and down his arm. Grove, suspicious of most medical men, tried his own cure. He drew a crude bulls eye on a fence at the Red Sox training park and used to stand there for long hours, throwing old balls at the fence, and hoping.

Then he went along all right for a couple of years. In fact, the year after Logan dispelled the devil from his arm he regained the American League's earned-run championship, a feat that has never been fully appreciated. Last season he won something like ten straight, and got up to 13 victories, with only a couple of losses, when the strange catalepsy set in on his arm. He pitched no more. The bewildered doctors worked on him, stroked their beards and called in consultants. One of them even recommended that Grove give up smoking. It almost killed him for awhile, but since last August he hasn't burned one of those fierce stogies that were his quiet joy. He's gained 10 or 15 pounds since then, and Cronin sincerely believes that Grove at 39, is again ready to take his place as an active immortal.

Through With Relief Jobs

"I'll never use him again in a relief role," Cronin told us. "It only would hurt him, to have him jumping up and warming up—in a bull pen—then sitting down again and cooling off. I won't ask him to take a regular turn either. I'm going to start him maybe once a week."

Cronin is going to open his season tomorrow (he hopes) with two untried rookies in the places of traded artisans, Ben Chapman and Pinky Higgins. "And they're going to be all right, too," Joseph retorted, sticking his chin out a mite farther. "This Tabor is a great young ball player. There's no doubt he'll make the grade. Williams is good. It'll take him a little while to become acclimated, but fundamentally he's okay. You'll never see him go for a bad ball at the plate and he can hit to left center as well as pull the ball into right. He hit one 9 miles to left center off Vander Meer down South."

Here lie Cronin's hopes: Two pea-green kids and a wrinkled old guy with a sleeping spirit living in his hide. If they come through, the Yankees are going to have a serious hurdle. But if the likely thing happens, there will be a little buck-fever between the kids, and dat old debbil in Grove might rear its head again, and strike him for the third and final out. In that case, Boston will finish south of the League's Mason and Dixon line.

Homing Pigeons Train for Races Sunday

Pigeon Racing Season Starts Sunday With 109-Mile Race

About 200 Feathered Speedsters Entered In Cumberland-to-Washington Event

The spring racing season for homing pigeons will get off to a flying start Sunday when some 200 feathery speedsters will take off in Cumberland, Md., and point their beaks toward Washington lofts.

Their owners, who comprise a little publicized but enthusiastic band of homing pigeon breeders and trainers, will be a nervous lot Sunday as this opening race over the 109-mile stretch may foretell a successful or mediocre season.

Barring adverse weather conditions, hungry hawks and an overabundance of radio activity, the season should please one and all, a quick survey of the racing pigeon situation in the District indicated yesterday.

Ready for Race

Fanciers of the homing pigeon on all fronts reported their charges will be in top shape for the "weighing-in" ceremonies scheduled for Saturday night. Members of the half-dozen pigeon racing clubs in Washington will take their birds to various centers here where they will be classified, given numbers and crated for shipping to the starting point of the race in Cumberland.

Raymond Owens and Francis McFarlane, members of the Aero Racing Pigeon Association, at the Owens loft, 1217 Fourth street southwest, yesterday gave a behind the scenes account of the domestic fowl sport, which not only is growing in Washington, but also is becoming a national pastime.

"These are not the type of pigeons that just sit around people's houses," Owens enlightened, looking fondly at 38 sleek racers he will enter in the coming season. "Racing pigeons are not that way."

Not a Tony Galento among them.

Ruth Says Yanks Will Win With Or Without Lou

By the United Press.

New York, April 19.—Babe Ruth, unemployed at the start of another baseball season, predicted today that the Yankees will win their fourth straight pennant whether or not Lou Gehrig folds up.

RUTH

"They'll miss Lou a lot if he does fade out," the all-time home run king admitted in an interview at his Riverside Drive apartment. "You can't take a hustlin' feller like Lou out of an infield without missin' him—regardless of what he's doin' at bat or at the bag. It's breakin' up a combination, see?

"But even with Gehrig gone, the Yanks have still got too much power for the other clubs. I mean too many long-hittin' fellers who can break up a ball game at any time. It's almost impossible to beat a club like that over a long stretch."

Fresh Rumors, Denials Fly At Georgetown

Mellendeck, McGowan May Join Baseball Team Soon—They Say

By Jack Munhall.

Though the Georgetown University baseball team yesterday was compelled for the third straight day to practice indoors for the Maryland game Saturday, because its field was unplayable, there was considerable activity around the campus.

The clang of laborers' hammers, busily constructing additional seats for the capacity crowd which is expected for the game mixed unharmoniously with a fresh storm of rumors and denials that has been hovering over the Hilltop for several weeks.

Rumor and denial No. 1 was whether Joe Mellendeck, the Hoyas' great triple-threat halfback, who was carried from the Maryland football game last season with a badly twisted knee, would be able to play baseball this spring or whether he would ever play any sport again.

And rumor and denial No. 2 was that Johnny McGowan, sophomore basketball and baseball star, who dropped the court squad near the end of the campaign after a siege of flu, would pop up in Georgetown's outfield against Maryland Saturday afternoon.

The match was played in a high wind. Barnes' service and accurate placements were deciding factors.

Stone Mason Plods Distance in Driving Rain to Shorten Time 2 Min., 9.8 Secs.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, April 19.—Spurred on by the need of employment instead of glory, Ellison (Tarzan) Brown, swarthy Narragansett Indian from Alton, R. I., toda-- ran the fastest marathon in history to gain his second victory in the last four Boston A. A. races from Hopkinton to this city.

Brown, a stone mason and out of work since he competed in the Olympics after winning the 1936 race, plodded the 26 miles, 385 yards, mostly through a driving rain, in 2 hours, 28 minutes and 51.8 seconds. He finished more than a quarter-mile ahead of the closest of his 178 rivals, Don Heinicke, of Baltimore, a dark horse who had run in but five previous marathons elsewhere.

Snaps All Records

The Indian was 2 minutes 9.8 seconds faster than the course's 6-year-old record and 27.4 seconds better than the time made by Kitei Son, the Japanese Olympic champion, when he became the first runner in the world to break 2½ hours for such an endurance race.

Heinicke, who settled down in ninth place when the bulky pack broke up after the first 2 miles, finished in 2.31:24.6, about a quarter-mile ahead of Walter Young, who was rewarded with a police appointment in Verdun, Que., after he won this event two years ago. Young's time was 2.32:41.8.

Pat Dengis, of Baltimore, and Leslie Pawson, of Pawtucket, R. I., the pre-race favorites, crossed the line in fourth and fifth positions, in 2.33:22.6 and 2.33:57.6 respectively. The latter set the course record in 1933 and won last year to become one of the four "repeaters" in the event.

Next five Finishers

The next five finishers and their times were Paul Donato, of Boston, 2.34:25.2; Walter Hornby, of Hamilton, Ontario, 2.37:11; Gerard Cote, of Verdun, Quebec, 2.37:43; Fred Bristow, of Toronto, Ontario, 2.38:44, and Andre Brunelle, of Medford, 2.39:09.

Johnny Kelley, of Arlington, the 1935 leader, was thirteenth and the seven times successful Clarence Demar, was far back in thirtieth place.

"I hope this win will enable me to get a job, as it did Young two years ago." Brown exclaimed after receiving medical attention that was unneeded, for he lost only two of his 133 pounds during the race.

Miami Manicurist Judged Anglers' Tourney Winner

Miami, Fla., April 19 (U.P.).—Frankee Laidlaw, attractive Miami manicurist, tonight was acclaimed outstanding angler of the fourth annual Metropolitan Miami Fishing Tournament.

She won the award of the 99-day tournament by catching a 102½-pound tarpon last January from a rowboat on an extremely light plug casting outfit at night.

Dorothy Leonard Wins Swim Title

Chicago, April 19 (AP).—Dorothy Leonard, New England's 220-yard free style title holder, added the Women's National Indoor A. A. U. swimming crown to her collection tonight, a rousing finish defeating Halina Tomska, of Detroit, the defending champion, by a bare 6 inches. The time was 2 minutes 35.3 seconds.

Katherine Rawls Thompson, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., set the early pace in the 220, first of three national championships that beckoned the Nation's ranking women swimming stars in the Medinah Pool.

Miss Tomska overtook her at the 100-yard mark and held a 5-yard advantage when Miss Leonard, of Worcester, Mass, turned on her kick in the last 75 yards.

Silva Upsets Reid, Ranking Featherweight

Mexican Gains Clear Decision in Battle At Turner's Arena

By Al Hailey.

A promising contender for a shot at Joey Archibald's newly gained world's featherweight crown blossomed out last night at Turner's Arena in the form of a battered Los Angeles boy, Mexican Joe Silva, who slugged his way to a 10-round decision over Al Reid, of New York City, ninth ranking featherweight.

After the opening round, there was little doubt about the outcome. Silva came out swinging and covered the New York lad with a stinging series of rights and lefts which left Reid's face a fine beet-red color.

Silva went into the ring on the short end of last night's odds which shifted at the last minute to 6-5 on Reid. He showed his disregard of this by driving Reid all over the ring. The crowd took a liking to the Mexican and began screaming for a knockout late in the fight as Reid slowed down under the punishing rights Silva was planting in his left kidney.

Decision of the judges was unanimous. The Post rating gave Silva eight of the ten rounds.

After the sixth, it was Silva all the way.

Officials reported an attendance of 1,029, far short of that expected to witness Silva's bid for featherweight fame. The crowd went home pleased, however, and shouting for an Archibald-Silva match here. Jack Laken, Silva's manager said, "We'll get it."

Promoter Joe Turner's paying guests saw plenty of action in the preliminaries. The four rounders were featured by a slugging spree between Nick Manfredo, of Baltimore, and Wild Man Marino, of Wilmington, who lived up to his name in every respect but won a unanimous decision over the game but outclassed Manfredo.

Keeping the house in a continuous uproar, Jack Hatcher, of Richmond, and Pee Wee Frankman, Fairmont, W. Va., featherweights, fought it out toe to toe through four rounds that threatened to end at any minute with Frankman reclining on the canvas. Hatcher was given the decision, and both boys received a big hand from the crowd.

Less colorful but more vicious, Sam Bacala, Baltimore, lightweight, pounded out a decision over Sid Silas, local boy.

Ex-Nat Sparks Team To Victory With 3 Timely Singles; Less Than 2,000 See Tilt

By the Associated Press.

Boston, April 19.—Playing in fog and rain, the Boston Bees opened their 1939 National League season today by taking a 12-inning game from Philadelphia, 7 to 6, in a morning Patriots' Day contest witnessed by fewer than 2,000 rugged baseball fans. The afternoon game was postponed because of rain.

Anxious to get the opening day's ceremonies out of the way, the two teams were forced to play three hours and 1 minute before the only major league game of the day was decided.

Under the leadership of their new manager, Doc Prothro, the Phils went into a 6-2 lead by puitting across three markers in the second, one in the fourth and two in the fifth. But the Bees, sparked by three newcomers—Al Simmons, Buddy Hassett and Eddie Miller—kept pecking away at the offerings of three hurlers until they tied the score in the ninth.

Bill Posedel, the fourth Bees pitcher, held the Phillies in check in the closing three innings. In the last of the twelfth, Garms got a life when Les Powers dropped a throw at first base. Maxie West pushed the Boston third sacker to second with a bunt and Hassett walked.

Simmons then smacked Butcher's first pitch to centerfield for his third single and Garms trotted home with the winning run.

The Bees outhit the visitors, 12 to 10, but were forced to use four pitchers, Turner, Errickson, Shoffner and Posedel. Mulcahy and

Lovett Appears Best in Trial For Series Starter With Anacostia

The dark-horse entry of Eastern High in the interhigh baseball series made its first public appearance yesterday on the Lincoln Park field, and with the assistance of five pitchers managed for a slim 4-3 victory over Bethesda-Chevy Chase. The parade of pitching talent was for the sole purpose of settling who, among Eastern's bountiful crop of moundsmen, was best qualified to pitch the team's first series game tomorrow with Anacostia.

If there was one outstanding youngster in the crowd, it was probably the stockily-built starter, "Puddin'" Lovett. He and his infield set down the batsmen who faced him in his two-inning stint in succession, giving up only one base on balls, fanning three and being touched for only one hit.

Though he lost the game, a great deal of credit for a brilliant performance went to Bethesda's youthful workhorse, Danny Wells, who went the route and allowed only six hits compared to the eight realized off Eastern pitchers. Most notable was the fact that Wells gave but two passes in nine innings.

Rally in Sixth

It took Eastern six innings to work up enough steam to stage a rally, but when it did three runs were the result. A double over the head of Bethesda's leftfielder, hit by Jack Teague in the second inning, gave the eventual winner a one-run lead, but Bethesda tied that up in the fourth. Dick Bogley pushed Johnny Shumate across with a neat grounder to rightfield, after Shumate had been hit by a pitch and Granville Custer had singled.

In the fifth Bethesda came right back to take a 3-1 lead, as the result of a pair of singles by Boswell and Shumate and a solid double by Mizell. Jim Devers gave up the three hits in succession, after fanning the first man up. He tightened down and struck out two more immediately afterward.

One Bad Steal

Eastern's three runs in the seventh came about something like this: Paul Cohill started off with a free trip to first. Bresnahan singled to center, Teague got around to third when Outfielder Eaton misjudged his fly, sending two men home. Another Bethesda error put Chance on first, and Tom Reno singled Teague home from third.

Eastern's rally might have come in the fifth inning had not Reno attempted to steal third with Teague already occupying that base. The latter moved toward home in the excitement and was nabbed by Catcher Leo Day. An infield out soon afterward stopped the threat at that point.

Bankers League

Hamilton's leading team in the Bankers League at Arcadia lost two to Washington Loan & Trust, but stayed a game in front with a week to go as City Bank lost two to National Savings. The leaders are only two games in front of the fifth-place team in the wide-open race. Miller's 151 game and Ray Weber's 384 set were high for the night. Hamilton had a season's record of 631 game, while W. B. Hibbs topped team set scores with 1,736.

Civic Club

Lido won the pennant in the Civic Club League at Arcadia on total pins over Kiwanis No. 1. The coleaders each lost two games on the final night's play.

Garage Team Leads Heurich Bowling Loop

Jimmy Burns' 163 And 391 Set Paces Team Into 1st Place

The Garage team of the Heurich Brewing League took first place in Class E of the Washington City Duckpin Association Tournament last night at Columbia Bowling Alleys with a 1,667 total, a figure that will probably place them in the prize winning bracket.

Jimmy Burns finished with a powerful 163 game and led the Garage team with a 391 set, while George Molloy, Capital Golf Club star, was next with 351.

Youngblood Hardware, first team to roll in Class B, counted 1708 for a two-pin lead over the team it trailed in the Takoma League standings. Takoma Billiards, 'Dutch' Sherbahn's 359 and Sig Solem's led the teams, respectively.

Temple Alleys Class C team went into second place in its division with 1685, led by J. Briles 378, while Bureau of Budget's 1617 count paced the Class D rollers, aided by F. J. Lawton's 350.

Catholic Tourney

Ted Van Doren took the singles lead in the annual Washington Catholic League tournament last night at Takoma with a 395 total, with Bill Curtin's 379, second. Blessed Sacrament No. 1 (B) took the team lead with 1,833, with St. Anthony's No. 1, second with 1,749. Robinson and Weeks posted high doubles set of 776.

Recreation League

Karl Gochenour rolled a season's record set of 465, one of the highest in the city this year, as University Shop won the title in the Recreation League in sensational fashion. The champions won a double-header from Tucci's Plumbers and Sammy's Liquors, sweeping six games, while American Window Cleaners, previous leaders, lost two to Herzog's and the pennant on total pins.

Gochenour had 144, 155 and 156 in his record set and came back with 409 in the second set. Fred Murphy had 404 and Lou Pantos 438 in the record night's play.

U. S. Engineers

W. Thompson's 372 set won the U. S. Engineers League Sweepstakes last night at Chevy Chase Alleys, followed by C. Gilbreath with 370 and Melva McClung, 364. P. Conrod's 126 game and A. Logan's 344 set were also among the prize winners.

K. of C. League

Cortes took three from Olando and had high team game and set of 562-1,662 in the Knights of Columbus League last night at Rendezvous. Balboa took three from Pinta; LaSalle won the odd one over Trinidad and DeSoto two from Santa Maria. Smith's 147 game and Collins' set of 387 accounted for the individual honors.

Eastern Diamond Prospects In Hands of Rookie Squad

Champions Hard Hit by Graduation; Entire Team Lacks Experience, but May Win

(This is the final article of a series discussing the 1939 prospects of each of the seven public high baseball teams which start their annual series tomorrow.)

By Bill Burnett.

When Eastern High, the defending champ, takes the field against Anacostia tomorrow in one half of a double-header starting the interhigh series—Roosevelt meets Wilson in the other half—a lot of fans will expect the White Tide to start another romp to the crown. In 8 out of the last 10 championship series that has been the case, and high school enthusiasts have come to expect it.

It won't happen this year, however. The "romp" part of it won't happen, anyway. Eastern might manage to get through games with the teams in its division, Tech and Anacostia, but there'll be an entirely different story when it faces the West section champ. Along with a larger number of nines in the latter section, it also boasts some of the stronger clubs, and the one that gets through to the finals will be a powerful team, indeed.

Why won't Eastern have an easy time of it? The reason is about the same as that which pushed the Lincoln Parkers from first place in the football series to a ragged second division. The time has come for starting a new crop of youngsters on the baseball trail, and novices can't be expected to do too well in their first year.

Les Cooksey, outfielder, happens to be the only veteran first-stringer left to Coach Chief Guyon, the rest of his squad of 130 candidates having played a few games or none at all. The real pinch, however, will be in the pitching department, where high school ball games are really won and lost.

"Lefty" Stockwell and "Rip" Carver, the pair that was almost solely responsible for Eastern's championships in 1937 and 1938, have graduated, and in their places are "Puddin'" Lovett and Warren Earhardt, a pair of righthanders. Lovett has fairly good control and a baffling change of pace, but both he and Earhardt will need more than a little experience.

"In their first year," says Chief Guyon, "you can't expect any of these kids to have the poise and timing which comes from seasoning. They get in a tight spot and what do they do—well, something pretty wrong, you can bet."

"As a matter of fact," Guyon continues, "almost anyone in town knows as much about my team as I do. That's a fact. The weather has been so sloppy I've had it inside most of the time, and you can't tell what a team's like in skull practice. We might go well—and then, again, we might not."

So much for what might be a coach's pessimism. Bethesda's nine furnished a good gauge of Eastern's power yesterday when it lost by only one run, after having been beaten decisively by Wilson. On the strength of that, the Tide would appear to be weak at the plate, while its pitching and fielding is good. This happens to the fact.

Paul Cohill, reformed gridder, is as good a catcher as any newcomer in the schools. He has a strong and accurate arm and plays heady ball. Francis Hallama, Johnny Stassulli and Tommy Reno will hold down the bases well enough, and Johnny McGoman is a clever shortstop.

The outfield, besides Cooksey, will be played by Galasso and Jack Teague, both with some experience. Teague is probably the heaviest hitter on the club, and can cover the wide open spaces with the best of them.

Everything depends on the hitting and pitching, and the prospects there aren't so bright. If Eastern wins the series, Chief Guyon won't be surprised, and if it loses, he won't be surprised either.

Pigeons

Owens' pigeons are trained down to a fine point, "just as any box fighter or race horse," said Owens, placing the three in one class without a moment's hesitation.

Like other homing pigeons, Owens' birds are the result of thousands of generations of breeding. To illustrate their homing instinct is unimpeachable, he released what he termed a red checkered hen and in a few moments he was back, pecking at the trap leading into the loft.

There was a time, back in 1934, when homing pigeons appeared on the verge of declaring an end to coming home, it was recalled. Fully 70 per cent of the pieons released by the American Racing Pigeon Union that year failed to show up. Harried pigeon club officials blamed almost everything—weather, murderous hawks and even operations of a radio transmitter.

The Navy Department conducted experiments with the influence of radio activity on the pigeons' homing instinct and finally admitted the birds did seem to fly in "a confused manner" when in the vicinity of powerful transmitters.

A couple of hawks, however, can play havoc with a race, Owens explained. Notwithstanding his years of breeding, the homing pigeon is still observed to become highly nervous and erratic in flight when confronted with a hungry hawk.

The home life of Owens' homing pigeons never has been disrupted by truant speedsters, however, he explained, although sudden storms springing up after pigeons were released have wiped out his entire list of entries.

From babyhood Owens' racers are given special care. At the tender age of ten days they are banded for life—that is, a metal band bearing a number and the initials of his racing club is placed on the pigeon's leg.

Until it is six weeks old, the bird just knocks around the pigeon loft gabbing with the veteran fliers in the gutteral gargling accents peculiar to the pigeon—blue blood and White House sidewalk poacher alike.

The training stage begins after six weeks. The birds, often along with their elders, are taken out daily to points along the racing course they will later fly. Released at distances increased daily, they gradually get a complete picture of the course and then are set for competition.

Down in Front

With Richards Vidmer

New York, April 19.—Gene Tunney offered the suggestion that the heavyweight situation would take on a little more meaning if Joe Louis were prevented from defending his title until someone comes along who is capable of giving him a real fight.

VIDMER

"Book these bouts as exhibition contests," the former undefeated ruler of the ring suggested.

But who is going to prevent Louis from defending his title against all comers, good, bad and indifferent, if he is willing, and as long as the public pays more than it would to witness a bout booked merely as an exhibition?

Besides, there is no harm in it, unless his string of victories in defense of his title proves a bit misleading to the future generations of fight fans. Looking over Louis' record 50, or even 20 years hence, someone might get the impression that Jack Roper and Tony Galento were pretty fair fighters in their time.

However, if anyone is to blame for this state of affairs, which I repeat I don't find in the least alarming, it is the man who goes to the ticket window and lays down his money for a ringside seat. As long as the crowds gather when Louis defends his crown, no matter how inferior his opponent may be, then you can't blame Louis for fighting or the promotors from promoting. In fact, you can't blame the commissions for sanctioning the bouts; after all, they are supposed to see that the public gets what it wants, and it is rather obvious that the public wants to see Louis fight—anybody.

No doubt John Henry Lewis is a better fighter than Jack Roper, whom Joe belted out in two minutes and twenty seconds of the first round the other night. And by the way I am not claiming any distinction for having picked the winner and the round, really, it was nothing. But as I was saying, John Henry Lewis probably is a better fighter than Roper, and Schmeling probably is a better fighter than John Henry. But they all have gone the same way—one round and out! For when lightning strikes it hits a fireplug just a hard as it dose a splinter.

And there is little doubt that Tony Galento will go the same way, too. The public has been informed of this fact repeatedly. I doubt if you could get a bet on Tony to beat Louis at any odds. Yet there is every prospect that from 40,000 to 60,000 persons will be willing to pay the price to see the battle, short as it may be.

No one is forcing them to put up the money that makes the meeting worth while from Louis' angle, or Galento's angle or Mike Jacob's angle. They don't have to go if they don't want to, or think it isn't worth while. But because they will go and no attempt has been made to sell them tickets under false pretenses, then I don't blame the fighters or the promotors for taking their cut.

Those who have heard Fritz Kreisler play "Liebestraum" on his fiddle no doubt would be willing to pay the price of a ticket to hear him play it again. And those who have seen Joe Louis knock out Schmeling, Lewis or Roper in one round are just as eager to see him repeat the performance against Galento.

Rained Out Third Day in Row, Nats Hope to Play Today

Sun Appears In Philly, Buoys Hopes

Jimmy DeShong Still Harris' Pitching Choice; Krakky May Face Yanks Friday

By Shirley Povich.
A Star Correspondent.

Philadelphia, April 19.—Without moving a muscle, the Nats have compiled a three-game losing streak. Today, for the third straight day, they lost a decision to the weather man who held 'em hitless, runless and gameless. With the season three days old, the Nats haven't tossed a ball, hit a ball or even muffed a ball.

But they'll try again tomorrow. They'll try to stage a ballgame with the Athletics at Shibe Park—the game that was originally scheduled for Tuesday. And late this afternoon as Philadelphia's office workers piled out of the downtown buildings there was definite hope that a ballgame would be played tomorrow, because an element, vaguely remembered as the sun, had shyly put in its first appearance in a week.

It's a sizable job that the sun will have to do, though, if the game is to be played. Because Shibe Park's infield, a young bog since the rains which started Sunday, has been uncovered and unplayable. It was in such a muddy condition today that the Nats were unable even to practice on the diamond.

Players Limber Up

In the fear that his athletes would get rusty, though, Manager Bucky Harris sent his pitchers and catchers and a half dozen other of his lads out to the park nevertheless They gamboled on the outfield and otherwise limbered up.

With the idleness becoming exasperating, Harris earlier had threatened to send the Nats out to the University of Pennsylvania gymnasium for some indoor practice. But Connie Mack suddenly relented and permitted the Nats the use of Shibe Park's outfield.

There hasn't been any change in the pitching program for what may be the opening game. Jimmy DeShong will go to the mound for the Nats and it will be George Caster, the A's knuckle ball artist, for Mr. Mack.

One effect of the two postponements here may be the restoration of Joe Krakauskas to a pitching role when the Nats return to Griffith Stadium on Friday to open their home season with the Yankees.

Mack Plans Changes

Originally Harris had planned to pitch Krakauskas during the series with the A's here, but with two games rained out, the big Lithuanian lefthander may get the Griffith Stadium job for which he was scheduled last Monday.

Connie Mack this season is contemplating a reversible batting order and against the righthanded pitching of DeShong tomorrow he will be striving for left-handed hitting strength.

Thus, instead of Wayne Ambler at second base, Mack will start Joe Gantenbein, a rookie from Toronto, and at first base will be Rookie Nick Etten instead of Dick Siebert. In his centerfield post, Mack will be benching the sensational Sam Chapman in favor of Dee Miles, a lefthanded hitter from Chattanooga.

The A's believe that they have come up with a star performer in young Miles, whom they purchased from Joe Engel for $25,000, but the Nats' management dissents. A few years ago they gave Miles two trials and were unimpressed with his defensive ability and his small show of ambition.

Presidents Meet Central In Alexandria

Play Three Games In as Many Days; Face John Marshall, Hopewell

Alexandria, Va., April 18.—George Washington High School diamonders face their busiest week-end of the current campaign beginning tomorrow afternoon, when they engage Central High in the first of three games to be played in as many days. Action is scheduled to get under way at 3:30.

On Friday afternoon the Presidents entertain the strong Hopewell High nine in a Virginia Class A Conference contest, while on Friday they play host to John Marshall High in another State test. Both games will be played on the home diamond.

In Hopewell and John Marshall, the Presidents face the two teams rated as the best in the Central District of the State Conference.

Tennis Match Off

Tennis matches between Georgetown and American scheduled for the Hilltop courts this afternoon have been indefinitely postponed.

Johnson Cup Play Features Week-End Golf

Georgetown Meets Catoctin; Publinks Team Plays Glenwood

The annual opening day handicap tournament for the Walter Johnson trophy at Congressional Country Club is the banner event of the first big week-end for the local club members—weather permitting.

In addition to the low net and gross awards in the Johnson trophy play, driving, pitching and putting contests will be staged under Wiffy Cox's direction.

A pair of team matches are on tap, Georgetown University's crack sextet, headed by Intercollegiate Champion Johnny Burke, will visit the Catoctin Club of Frederick Sunday in warmup test for the Eastern League matches.

The newly organized District public links team will entertain the Glenwood Club of Richmond at East Potomac in its initial test of the season at 1 p. m. Sunday. Pro Mel Shorey will play at the No. 1 position, with the team members including Tommy Doerer, Wilbur Lines, Arthur Myers, Earl Marcay, E. J. O'Reilly, John Ashton, Bob Wolfe, Bobby Burton, Joe Bailey, Jim Sweatte, Gene Fossum, Lew Spangler, Joe Micker, John McCarthy, Jim Gipe, Gus Kupka, Welby Kines and Lefty Phenix.

Capital's intra-club rivalry, the Alibiers against the Moaners, will be renewed with last week's rain-postponed match on tap starting at 12 o'clock Sunday. Army and Navy mixed foursomes will compete in a handicap event, while two-day events include a 3-4-5 tourney at Indian Spring, blind bogey tournaments at Kenwood, Beaver Dam, Manor and Rock Creek and a selective holes affair at Argyle.

Public links golfers will continue qualifying in the spring tournament at East Potomac, with a field of 500 expected to post scores for the match play rounds.

Columbia and Chevy Chase opening events are set for a later date, while Woodmont, Washington and Belle Haven have not yet released season's schedules.

Pro-Amateur Event Scheduled Monday

Bill Schreiber will play host to the Middle Atlantic professionals next Monday in a scheduled pro-amateur tournament at Mount Pleasant, Baltimore. The amateurs will play from scratch, with play starting at 1 p. m.

The course is the scene of the National Public Links championship in July, and is one of the finest municipal courses in the country. With the simon-pures playing from scratch, the fields are expected to be much larger in the pro-ams this year, as the former system of handicapping met with considerable objection.

Mrs. Rowan to Accept Keefer Cup Entries

Mrs. Hugh Rowan will accept entries for the Mrs. Frank R. Keefer Cup Tournament at Chevy Chase according to Mrs. Robert A. Lacey, president of the Women's District Golf Association. Mrs. DuBose was originally scheduled to take the entries

Deadline for the entries is Monday, May 24, at 1 p. m., while the tournament is scheduled April 26-27. Play will be in threesomes.

Rough Action Promised on Mat Tonight

'I'll Tear Him to Pieces,' Say Both Golden Terror And 'Baker Boy' Hader

If the cash customers do not jump out of their seats tonight at Turner's Arena when a wrestler billed as King Kong enters the ring, they will get to see Jack Hader, Kansas baker boy, attempt to unmask The Golden Terror in the 90-minute feature bout.

KING KONG

The fans are likely to jump when confronted with the face and general make-up of King Kong, originally Kazinmirz Symkowski, 7 foot 3 pole, who will meet Louis Bacigalupi in a 30-minute preliminary.

The Terror, calling himself wrestling's No. 1 villain, yesterday informed Promoter Joe Turner he of a certainty will "tear this Hader to pieces," just after Hader had pronounced he will "tear this Terror to pieces."

Hader recently aroused the ire of the fans by banging the head of Rosy Red Ryan, Lithuanian groan artist, against a ring post until Ryan lapsed into unconsciousness. The Terror, also hissed for general roughness, claims he will avenge this treatment of Ryan and thus perform his first noble deed in the ring.

In the semiwindup, George Pencheff, who last week disposed of Alonzo Woods in the record time of 30 seconds, will meet Woods in a return match. Red Ryan will meet David Mayor, Jewish newcomer, and Jim Clinstock will meet Ernie Powers. The card opens at 8:30 p. m.

Hilltop said he didn't believe Mellendeck ever would play football again because the boy can't yet bear his full weight on the injured knee.

Last night, however, this report was squelched by Dr. Matthew E. Donahue, in whose care Mellendeck was placed after his knee was hurt in the first few minutes of the Maryland game, who declared he didn't believe the lad's injury was serious at all.

"Mellendeck was supposed to have appeared in his office today for examination," Dr. Donahue said, "but I haven't seen him. One other time he failed to show up for an appointment and on a third occasion I was called away from an examination by an emergency case.

"So I haven't had a chance to look over the knee since right after the Maryland game."

The McGowan episode is not near so baffling yet it has its peculiarities. The 6-foot 2-inch sophomore who is supposedly a great baseball prospect because he can field and hit and play both the infield and outfield, was reported yesterday as having worked out in the gym with the rest of the team since returning to school Monday.

But here it is again.

Coach Judge last night when asked about the possibility that McGowan might break into the game against Maryland Saturday paused in incredulity before saying that he hadn't even seen McGowan since before Easter and that he hasn't been with the rest of the team for several days because rain canceled drills.

Old Dominion Kennel Club Show Scheduled April 29

Advance Entries Indicate Unusual Success For Event; Entries Will Close Saturday

What advance entries indicate will be the Old Dominion Kennel Club's largest and most successful dog show will be staged on April 29 at the municipal ball park grounds in Alexandria.

Entries close next Saturday in Philadelphia at the office of the Foley Dog Show Organization, 2009 Ranstead street, which benches the show. Blanks should therefore be in the mail by Friday evening to assure any dog a place in the catalogue and under the judge's eye.

Blanks may be procured from any member of the club or from the officers, who are George Berner, president; Mrs. R. C. Birney, vice president; Mrs. Raymond L. Scaggs, secretary; John Anderson, treasurer. They are also distributed by The Washington Post office, by pet shops and vets, by the John K. Moss Feed Co., and in Alexandria by members of the board of lady managers of the Alexandria Hospital, which is the beneficiary, and of the John Alexander Post of the D. A. R., Miss Marion S. Moncure, regent.

Blanks for Both Shows

Since the National Capital Kennel Club of Washington is holding an equally important and well-benched show the next day, April 30, at the Meadowbrook Country Club in Chevy Chase, members of both clubs, and the other distributors, have blanks for both shows. Officers of the National Kennel Club are Frank Downing, of Baltimore, president; A. Dowell Mansfield and Gordon Louk, vice presidents; Mrs. Jere B. Mackie, secretary and treasurer.

Since to be shown a dog does not have to be registered or even to have an established pedigree, hundreds of local owners are asking information with a view to entering their pets. Club members say that by consulting an exhibitor of experience, the novice's first steps may be made even more easy, and all have volunteered to help beginners.

And to those who do not enter dogs but come to see the day's events, the Old Dominion Kennel Club and the National Capital Kennel Club promise amusement, excitement and good sportsmanship. Competition in the rings keeps spectators in constant suspense. But many like even more to drfit up and down the aisles, talking to dog owners and seeing their favorites at close quarters.

Morstep, Paying $36.30, Wins Feature at Havre de Grace

Kenty Takes Belair Handicap by Four Lengths; Double Pays Backers $11.60

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Haver de Grace, Md., April 19.—The green and white of the Shandon Farm didn't have to be sent to the laundry tonight but they helped send the favorite players to the cleaner's earlier this afternoon.

Morstep, after running forward, backward and sideways in seven races since she last scored at Laurel picked today as her day to "pick 'em up and put 'em down" in a manner that outclassed some good 3-year-olds essaying for a purse in the Griffwood, a 6-furlong sprint.

Morstep brought those in the crowd of 6,000 who backed her a juicy $36.30 mutuel. She won by two lengths, with the A. C. C. Stable's Ace Call, the people's choice, in second position, and the Belair Stud's derby candidate, Challenge, in third place. Six other colts and fillies made up the field.

Easy Victory

As was the case in most of the day's races, an easy victory marked the running of the Belair Handicap, the sixth race. Kenty, of Charles Town fame, carried the silks of E. R. Pike to a four-length triumph in a trip of a mile and a sixteenth. Again the A. C. C. stable furnished the second horse. This time it was Gerald, one that set the pace for three-quarters before Jockey H. Dabson put him to his winning drive turning into the final straightaway.

Kenty was a $10.20 shot. The big disappointment in the field of four was W. E. Boeing's Piccolo, which could not get out of his own way in the closing half mile.

Double Pays $11.60

After a thundershower preceded the program, conditions overhead were good. However, the track was as sticky as a swamp.

The favorite daily double proved the right one. Those who bet the "1 and 2" combination cashed the tickets for $11.60. Apprehend, owned and operated by H. G. Bedwell, leading trainer at the meeting, won the first race at $6.80, while Rumba Gus, owned by Gustav Ring, Baltimore and Washington builder, made a runaway of the second race to bring his backers $4.40.

Apprehend won his race the hard way. He was forced to race wide and got up in the final sixteenth under a terrific drive by Jockey Al Shelhamer. Sylvia G. and Jockey Sammy Palumbo, the famed Charles Town pair, teamed to be second with the mare carrying odds of almost 60 to 1. Hiblaze was the third horse.

Rumba Gus Scores Again

Rumba Gus, believed headed for big things on the turf, made it two victories in three starts. Seldom has a horse won any easier than this Saxon colt. He stepped out of the gate in front and the farther he went the greater was his margin. Jockey Glenn Smith took a grip on him at the end and he still hung up time of 0:55 4-5, remarkable over the heavy track. Flaming High and Air Stream were second and third in a tight fit.

There was a delay of 9 minutes at the post caused principally by Miss Maker falling between the stalls. She finally regained her feet but failed to run back to her recent Bowie victory.

Grand Pageant was the winner of the third race by a good seven lengths and paid a $14.90 mutuel. Ivy X. was second ahead of Mystery Miss, the even money favorite. Mystery Miss, once third to Challedon, tried to gain the early lead but Butterman outran her. She finally got to the front but tired suddenly. Grand Pageant was put on the outside for bad post manners and was kept wide throughout. She bounded to the front when asked and outclassed her rivals.

Bill Bennings

At The Post

Havre De Grace, Md., April 19.

Dear Al:

There's an old track saw to the effect that the racegoer checks his brains at the gate. Mutuel department employes and track officials are still laughing about a woman who claimed she asked for one $5 ticket and received two for her $10 bill. She argued long and loud that she wanted one ticket and her change. In the meanwhile the race was run and the horse on which she held the two $5 tickets won at good odds. She still maintained that the track was poorly operated and hurled abuse on all sides. Finally she went to the secretary's office where she received little more than smiles. It was explained to her that the bet had won but she still wanted her rights. She was last seen heading for the pay-off window. She should be glad that somewhere along the line somebody didn't dish her out a five-spot and take the ticket. There has been lots of talk about Don Meade applying for a license here in order to ride Volitant in the Chesapeake on Saturday. I've been rather reliably informed that Meade will have to stay in New York and ride Sir Damion in a stake at Jamaica. Norris Royden, the Kentucky writer, says that Meade should take his time about coming down here to ride. He is O. K. in New York so he had better take it easy and stay there for a while. Impound was out on the track today for a workout just as the regulars were arriving. The Vanderbilt colt slopped a mile through the mud in 1:54 3-5 under wraps. He was a fast closer around here last season and may yet prove a threat in the Chesapeake, Derby and Preakness. Volitant and Porter's Mite went through easy trials earlier in the day. With the track officials frowning at the bad weather and the betting falling off "Hold Tight" was played over the public address system just before the first race. Too bad Art (Thin Man) Brown wasn't here. BILL.

First race—Satin Rolls held on with good courage when second to Miss Maker at Bowie. He has speed and should beat this field if he likes the heavy track. Millchic displayed good effort behind the top horse in that heat and will be the one to beat. Sealoch was favorite when beaten by Belle High Monday and may surprise.

Second race—General Mowlee is nicely placed in this event and off the merits of his second to Phara Belle should have little trouble accounting for the brackets. Dinamita makes his first start of the year but gets a high figure. Bold Fay failed in cheaper company.

Third race—Dizzy Dame is real good in her present form. She beat this kind at Bowie and was off poorly in her last to finish a game third to Ugin. Slight edge here. French Bread beat the top horse in that heat, gets a good figure and may prove hard to beat. Dog Flower is not outclassed and will be dangerous if fit.

Fourth race—Alms was second to Day Off in the Louisiana Derby and has placed in his four starts this year. He meets ordinary company in this allowance event and should win. Miss Happy was an easy winner over a classy field of 3-year-olds at Tropical and appears best of the others. Evening Light for show.

Fifth race—Helen's Lad broke badly when running with this company last outing, trailed his field and came with a rush at the finish. With better racing luck he should win. Mystic Isle beat the top horse in that heat and will be the one to beat today. Cackle Time can better poor recent efforts.

Sixth race—Ann Mowlee showed a tendency to come from behind in sprints at Bowie and is well placed in this route race. Has the edge in an open race. Scoria raced well with better company and may be a threat. Charles F. can better dull race at Bowie.

Seventh race—Rowes Crump, the favorite in his last heat, took the top and quit. He moves up in mud and going a shorter route today. Should win. Balapin showed good effort when second to Count Tetrarch and is on edge for one of his good races. Lady Democrat won her last and will be a dangerous factor.

Best bet—General Mowlee.

Jamaica Race Card Attracts Only 31 Horses

Bill Farnsworth Wins Feature on Leanest Program in Years

Jamaica Race Track, N. Y., April 19 (A.P.).—With an unrelenting weatherman still in a malicious mood, the leanest program in years was presented here this chilly, damp afternoon. Six races were run over a track still deep in mud. Only 31 horses competed on the program, which was reminiscent of the dull days prior to New York's new deal in racing, that came in 1934.

The top attraction was the Polydor Handicap of 6 furlongs. Four horses, all making their 1939 bows, clashed. Mrs. G. C. Winfrey's Bill Farnsworth, which receded to 16 to 5, clicked by three lengths over A. G. C. Sage's 7-to-10 shot Entracte, first losing choice of the day. E. W. Duffy's Grey Gold was beaten five lengths for the place, with Double Back last. It was a two-horse affair all the way, with Bill Farnsworth finally racing Entracte into defeat and pulling clear in the last sixteenth. The time was 1:13 2-5.

The chief reason for the small fields is simply that horsemen are reluctant to subject their charges to the treacherous elements prevailing here at present. Trainers do not wish to van their horses from other tracks in the cold, damp weather and hold them until race time. They are also against trying to cool out thoroughbreds under such conditions. The slippery footing of the past two days creates the possibility that carefully primed steeds might "knock themselves out" and jeopardize their chances for the rest of the season. Then there are conditioners who figure there is plenty of time left in New York's 177 days of sport for sending their representatives into action.

The first four days of the meeting have shown 175 horses starting in 26 races, an average field of slightly less than seven horses. The first two days were not so bad, but Tuesday found only 41 horses competing in six events, decided in fog, mist and slop. The attendance, considering such adversity, has stood up very well, with a great sendoff on opening day. Tomorrow may bring some improvement, for 56 horses were named overnight for seven events. Warmer weather is predicted, even though the track cannot dry out overnight.

Subpenas Ordered In Race Probe

Tallahassee, Fla., April 19 (A.P.).—A Florida Senate investigating committee ordered subpenas issued today for John C. Horning, developer of ill-fated Gulfstream horse track at Hollywood, Fla., and for officials of Hialeah and Tropical Park tracks in Miami to give testimony here Monday.

The committee will investigate charges by Senator Ernest Graham, of Miami, that Horning's track was forced by Miami racing men to close after three days this season.

APPREHEND, rated after being sent wide for racing room leaving backstretch, responded gamely on outside when placed to drive and wore down leaders to win going away. SYLVIA G., close to pace from start, held on willingly in final stages. HI-BLAZE forced the pace of HAPPY HOSTESS, took brief lead inside eighth pole, but lacked racing room thereafter. MATTAPONY, slow to begin, saved ground turning into stretch to improve position sharply, but had to be taken up when in tight quarters along rail nearing end. TULEYRIES LIN went forwardly throughout and closed gamely. TUTTICURIO went evenly. WAUGH POP could not threaten at any stage. HAPPY HOSTESS set good pace to midstretch and stopped suddenly.

Sloan Visions Highways to New Horizons

Gen. Motors Head Host at World's Fair Preview Dinner

New York, April 19.—A roll call of new things in development through industrial research, which disclosed several hundred amazing and significant new products and processes, was cited as basis for the expectation that the expansion of industrial frontiers has only begun in this country, and that industry will lead the way in the rebuilding of America in the world of tomorrow, at a preview "Highways to New Horizons" dinner given at the New York World's Fair last night by Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairman of General Motors Corporation.

Five hundred industrial and civic leaders were guests at the official dedication of the General Motor "Highways and Horizons" building at the fair and heard Mr. Sloan and Charles F. Kettering, vice president of General Motors in charge of research, envision the part industry may play in the Nation's future development.

Research Progress

Mr. Sloan's survey of research developments indicated that progress is industry-wide and not limited to a few companies. His survey brought him information from many fields—plastics, steel, oil, motors, chemistry, railroad, aviation and others. It revealed a variety of accomplishments, such as glass fibers, new materials from skim milk, new uses for waste products, air-conditioned and radio-equipped tractors.

Highway development was stressed by Mr. Sloan as a factor of great importance in the extension of "economic horizons" in the years ahead. The importance of improved traffic arteries was portrayed in a special dramatic presentation. The dramatization, with a cast of 25 characters and with unique lighting and sound effects, reviewed and forecast the significance of highways to civilization in the past, present and future. It was indicated that in the projected year 1960 new highways and improved motor transportation will enable more people to live away from cities and that slums and traffic congestion will be eradicated.

Street of 1960

Preceding the dinner program the guests rode for a third of a mile on moving sound chairs, viewing and hearing described Norman Bel Geddes' 35,000-square-foot "futurama" conception of America and its highways of 1960. They also toured the seven-acre "Highways and Horizons" building, the central feature of which is a full-sized street intersection of 1960, complete with elevated pedestrian ways and buildings as they may be in the future. The dinner itself was served in a huge room, finished in copper and rosewood, in which a special stage had been erected.

"I believe that these results of industry demonstrate what can be done in the development of new products and the improvement of old ones—how prosperous times can be restored through constructive work," said Mr. Sloan in referring to the results of his symposium. "I firmly believe that our continued, and always accelerating, efforts along these lines cannot fail to speed up recovery and prove that industry's developments will bring tangible results in solving our problems."

Peers Into Future

ALFRED P. SLOAN, Jr., chairman, General Motors Corporation

Unemployment Slightly Lower Than Year Ago

New York, April 19.—The number of persons unemployed in the United States showed a slight decline from January to February, dropping from 12,103,000 persons to 12,044,000, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute today.

The situation in February, however, showed little improvement over that in the same month last year when 12,395,000 persons were unemployed. The outlook is not bright for much better conditions in the near future. The unemployment problem can be solved only by a reduction in wage rates or by sufficient inflation to support the present level of wage rates.

Neither of these developments is in immediate prospect. The present tendency is toward deflation rather than toward inflation, while there is no indication that either the Government or labor will soon end their resistance to a reduction in wage rates.

Foreign Demand For Wheat Offsets Domestic Sales

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 19.—The best sustained foreign demand for wheat in weeks, coupled with reports of improved domestic milling trade, helped to lift prices as much as one-half cent before selling by traders who believed the European political situation less dangerous, wiped away the gains.

Announcement that the British Ambassador would return to Berlin and a stronger securities market had a bearish influence on dealers who are watching the foreign scene and guiding their market activity accordingly.

Export sales of North American wheat, estimated as high as 1,500,000 bushels, brought the total for the week close to 4,0000,000 bushels.

The best corn prices in more than a month were recorded early in the session, reflecting good demand from domestic processors and light country offerings, despite recent price advances.

Wheat closed unchanged to ¼ cent higher, compared with yesterday; May, 69⅛@69¼ July, 67⅞@68; Corn, ¼ to ½ cent higher; May, 49⅛@49¼; July, 50½. Oats, ⅛ cent higer. Rye, ⅛ to ⅜ cent lower. Lard, unchanged to 2 cents higher.

Inventory Drop Continues for Fourth Month

New York, April 19.—Manufacturers' stocks of finished goods declined in February for the fourth consecutive month and were about equal in volume to those held in July, 1937, according to estimates of the industrial conference board released today.

Although this downward movement has continued almost without interruption since January, 1938, the amount of finished goods held by industry was still 9.2 per cent above the average for 1936.

Inventories of semifinished goods in the hands of manufacturers advanced again during February for the fourth consecutive month and were 2.2. per cent higher than they were last October and 11.6 per cent higher than in 1936.

Raw material stocks rose slightly for the first time since April, 1938, and were about 1.4 per cent above the predepression level of 1936.

A comparison of the figures just released with those for the peak stocks of 1938 reveals the extent of the liquidation that has occurred during the last 13 months covered by the indexes. Raw material stocks have declined 13.1 per cent since April of last year; semi-finished goods, 9 per cent since May; and finished goods, 8.9 per cent since January, 1938.

Power Production Lower for Week

New York, April 19 (AP).—Electric power production in the United States for the week ended April 15 totaled 2,170,671,000 kilowatt hours, a loss of .1 of 1 per cent from 2,173,510,000 in the preceding week, but 10.9 per cent ahead of 1,957,573,000 in the comparable 1938 week, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

Am. Tel. Plans $320,000,000 Plant Program

16,000,000 Telephones Now in Service Is An All-Time Record

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 19.—The Bell System contemplates spending $320,000,000 this year for plant expenditures and improvement, an increase of $37,000,000 over 1938, Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., told the annual stockholders' meeting today.

The Telephone System, he said, has reached an "all-time high" of 16,000,000 telephones in service—800,000 more than in the "pre-depression peak in 1930." He said that only in the Northeastern section of the country were there fewer telephones today than in 1930.

More than 500 stockholders gathered in the company's building on lower Broadway to hear Gifford's remarks and to re-elect directors. There was a ripple of laughter through the room when, among nominations for a certified public accounting firm to audit the books of the company, was discovered the name "Sears, Roebuck & Co." The big mail order house was one of 60 nominees, but the election was won by a regular auditing firm.

"While it is gratifying," Mr. Gifford continued, "that the absolute number of telephones is at a new peak, the number of telephones per 100 of population for the country as a whole is still slightly lower than in 1930, although in the Southeast, Pacific and Rocky Mountain sections it is higher than in 1930. Our current rate of growth is encouraging."

U. S. Rubber

U. S. Rubber Co., first quarter earnings were "more than enough" to cover preferred requirements, P. B. Davis, jr., president, told stockholders at the annual meeting today. Sales for the year through April 15 were 25 per cent higher than for the corresponding 1938 period, he said. Inventories are carried at below market cost, he added.

Republic Steel

Republic Steel Corporation reported today consolidated net profit for the first quarter of 1939, after deduction of all charges, was $532,899, compared with a net loss of $3,062,564 in the first quarter of 1938.

Phelps Dodge

Phelps Dodge Corporation earned net income of about $2,100,000, or around 42 cents a share after depreciation but before depletion, during the first quarter of the year, Louis S. Cates, president, told stockholders at the annual meeting today. "Due to the small amount of copper on hand with consumers," Cates added, "with any improvement in general business conditions, there might be a buying movement in copper some time in the next month or two."

Gillette Safety Razor

Gillette Safety Razor Co. and subsidiaries today reported for the quarter ended March 31 net profit of $867,547, equal after preferred dividend requirements to 24 cents a share on common stock. This compared with $755,864, or 19 cents a common share in the March quarter last year.

United Corporation

Spot Cotton Higher With Futures Lower

New York, April 19 (AP).—May cotton advanced today in face of liquidation and transfers to distant positions. The spot month closed 5 points net higher while other months were unchanged to 5 lower. The tight spot situation—emphasized by small likelihood of release of Government loan stocks—was credited as the main factor in firmness of May. The entire list advanced early despite declines at Liverpool. Later demand fell off and hedge selling increased.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press.

London, April 19.—Substantial selling, believed to come from large institutions, caused British gilt-edged shares to decline in late dealings in the stock market today. Transatlantic shares closed fractions to 2 points down and foreign bonds were easier. Oil and mining issues moved ahead slightly and only minor changes were recorded in the industrial section. Rubbers were quiet.

Paris.—The bourse closed with a steady tone today in quiet trading. Suez Canal shares moved up 125 francs, while Bank of France was off 70. Rentes were mixed, finishing 30 centimes down to 10 higher.

Liverpool.—Short covering in wheat futures and scattered buying induced by continued improved demand for actual grain lifted prices ⅛ to ½d today. Cotton futures declined 2 to 6 points on liquidation in the near months by an Anglo-American house and selling against Brazilian cotton.

Prices Hold Steady in Very Light Trading Quiet Day Reflects Quiet Europe Some Foreign Bonds Register Advances

New York, April 19.—All was quiet on the European front today and it was even quieter in Wall Street. The ticker sputtered out the quotations for transactions in a paltry 436,880 shares and brokers lolled about as modest gains were made on the basis of hints that the powers that have been threatening war for weeks are showing some slight inclination to talk things over. Affairs in the financial district have been moving in response to the activities of European statesmen rather than carloadings or kilowatt hour output so while brokers didn't welcome the slack business, the world in general welcomed the cessation, temporary at least, in the art of inflammatory speeches about one's neighbors.

Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax announced that the British Ambassador soon would return to Germany and expressed the view that his government would never wish to abandon hope of mutual efforts to relieve international tension. He also denied any attempt by the British government to encircle either Germany of Italy. While tomorrow is Hitler's birthday, and the day has been feared as one which the Nazi followers would seize upon as a logical one for further aggression, there was at least no sign of trouble when Wall Street went home tonight.

Signs of conciliation were enough in themselves to account for the day's advance in securities. Gains of 1 and 2 points were fairly numerous among the speculative leaders and the composite average of the market showed a gain of 0.38 point. Steels, metals, rails and motors were well liked, and Chrysler, the day's most active stock, added 1¾ points, while General Motors was up a point.

Traders On Sidelines

It was apparent that active traders were keeping to the sidelines and had no intention of being attracted in by the mild upturn. A good rally in the third hour failed to gather much of a following.

Those who are considering taking a big position are considering whether or not the decline in domestic business has been discounted by the recent decline. Fear of war has without question been the chief motive power behind the breaking of the Munich low and such selling was augmented by the disappointing performance in domestic business, brought about in part by the war scare. While the business trend continues downward there are signs of resistance and the decline is not uniform, the fact that the stock market has in the last few days been holding in spite of the news from trade and industry is in itself an indication that a good proportion of investors feel the current prices have discounted the slump.

One of the most unfavorable situations in the domestic business situation is the bituminous strike. This is hurting the railroads, which were already having a difficult time, and this in turn will have its effect upon the steel industry. It will force the railroads to curtail further their purchases. The Baltimore & Ohio was reported today to have coal enough for only a week and the pinch also is being felt by utilities, some of which are shifting into oil, to the premanent disadvantage of the coal operators and miners. The Pittsburgh Terminal Coal Corporation was placed in receivership today.

Steel stocks moved upward with the general trend with gains of 1 and 1½ points in Bethlehem and United States Steel and a fraction gain by Republic, which submitted a better report than was anticipated. Anaconda led the metals with a point gain. Montgomery Ward was popular in the mercantile division and Central among the rails. Gains of around 1 to 2 points were scored by Allied Chemical, American Smelting, Telephone, Atchison, Harvester, Manville, Union Carbide and Westinghouse.

Bond Trading Narrow

Listed bond trading again was far under normal today so far as volume is concerned, but the tone improved. Small gains were noted in a majority of speculative domestic bonds and the foreign section also disclosed a sprinkling of advances. The movement was far from emphatic, however, indicating that most interests still prefer the sidelines. High grade investment media were well maintained, for all signs point to still higher records in excess reserves. Turnover amounted to $4,270,000.

Secondary railroad liens were quiet and mostly higher by small fractions. Borderline and default rails attracted a little buying. Holding company bonds and industrial convertibles were better, where changed. Interborough bonds were lower in the traction group, but Manhattan Railway issues advanced and B. M. T. 4½s also improved. Other special groups likewise developed a little firmness.

In the foreign division German, Italian, Polish and other bonds of countries in the immediately potential war zone showed losses. Belgians were better, but Scandinavians reflected continued uncertainty regarding international developments. Canadian and Australian obligations were quietly firm. Latin-American default bonds showed more losses than gains.

U. S. Charters For Firms Held 'Reasonable'

O'Mahoney Attacks Control in 'States Like Delaware'

Federal charters for interstate corporations were termed "the only way to solve the unemployment problem, preserve the competitive system for American business and keep open the door of opportunity" last night by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming.

"What can be more reasonable than that the Federal Government, which has jurisdiction over interstate commerce, should draw the contracts under which it is conducted," asked the Senator, who is chairman of the temporary national emergency committee.

"We cannot expect to solve our economic problems when corporations can write their own charters in a State like Delaware," he told 150 members of the National Association of Cost Accountants at a meeting in the Kennedy-Warren Hotel.

If the Federal Government could lay down rules for the conduct of corporations in their charters, he asserted, business could be set free from the "discretionary control of Government bureaucrats."

The Sherman antitrust act and Government interference in business through such agencies as the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Federal Trade Commission were necessary because the Federal Government had not the power to define the rights and duties of corporations in their charters, he said.

"The foe of business is not the Federal Government, but other businesses," he declared, pointing out that every charge of unfair business practice brought by the Federal Trade Commission against a corporation was initiated by another corporation.

Andrews Rules Overtime Pay Must Be in Cash

By the United Press.

Wage-Hour Administrator Elmer F. Andrews last night reversed himself and ruled that overtime in excess of 44 hours per week must be paid for in cash at the time an employe normally receives his regular pay check.

Andrews said that he "regretted that he gave a wrong impression of overtime requirements at a press conference" Tuesday when he said that overtime could be compensated for in cash or in time and one-half off.

"The act requires that the employe 'receive compensation' for overtime at one and one-half times his regular rate of pay," the Administrator said in a formal statement. "This means money, not time."

Hammond, La., April 19 (U.P.).—Ellis Jenkins, president of the Louisiana Farmers Protective Union, Inc., announced tonight that the union would sue in Federal Court at Little Rock, Ark., tomorrow seeking $8,328,576 from "the Nation's major food chains."

Britain Seeks Shell Steel Supplies Here

British Output, Now At Capacity, Does Not Meet Requirements

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 19.—Great Britain is canvassing United States steel mills for certain types of munitions, Iron Age said today in its weekly review of the industry.

"Inquiries have been received in the United States for sizable quantities of shell steel and other munitions materials," the trade publication said. "These are coming chiefly from England and Canada."

"Although steel production has been declining in the United States," the magazine continued, "a tighter steel situation is developing in Great Britain, where output of more than a million tons in March, virtually capacity, is not yet satisfying urgent requirements of the government for its armament program."

A drop in domestic ingot production for the fifth consecutive week, the review said, "indicating, perhaps, that production has been brought into closer ailnement with orders.

"The uncertainty which is affecting all branches of the industry is reflected in scrap markets. The sharpest break in the Iron Age composite scrap prices in a year and a half, amounting to 66 cents a ton, has brought this figure down to $14.42. Were it not for the influence of export transactions, prices in the East probably would have declined further."

Roosevelt Fights Sugar Act Changes

Calls Quota Proposals 'Serious Threat' to U. S. Trade Policy

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt expressed the hope yesterday that Congress would reject proposed changes in the sugar act which he described as "a serious threat" to the Administration's policy of improving relations among the American republics.

He wrote Chairman Jones (Democrat), Texas, of the House Agriculture Committee, that legislation sponsored by Senator Ellender (Democrat), Louisiana, would be inconsistent with the Government's "fundamental principles of fair play and fair dealing," essential to world economic recovery and peace.

Ellender's bill, passed in the Senate but facing opposition in Jones' committee, would adjust sugar quotas to give domestic producers a larger share of the domestic market. It would reduce the share of some territorial possessions.

The President blamed sugar lobbyists for the legislation, saying:

"The sugar lobbyists, who, in order to justify their employment must be professionally dissatisfied under any conditions, are pressing for drastic amendments to the act which would disrupt the balance established in the existing legislation as between the opposing interests of the various groups concerned."

The President said the measure would exempt certain large sugar cane plantations from compliance with quota provisions of the act, would remove the safeguards against high sugar prices and would discriminate against Puerto Rico and Hawaii and at the same time reduce the Cuban sugar quota.

RFC Extends So. Ry. Loan Five Years

Special Agreements Outside Eastern Field To Be Canceled

By the Associated Press.

New York, April 19.—Growing railway unemployment attributed to the mine shutdown in the eight-State Appalachian area was reported today by two major lines as negotiations between union miners and bituminous operators for a new labor contract dragged on in the sixth week.

Meanwhile, John L. Lewis carried out his threat to order a complete shutdown of the soft coal industry unless Appalachian region operators quickly came to terms with his United Mine Workers (C. I. O.) on a new contract.

150,000 More to Quit

Officials of the U. M. W. in districts outlying the Appalachian region began announcing that the C. I. O. president had notified them to terminate special agreements under which they have continued working while 338,000 Appalachian miners were idle. A U. M. A. spokesman here said about 150,000 miners in 14 States would be affected by the cancellation.

Two top conciliators of the United States Department of Labor—James F. Dewey and John R. Steelman director of the conciliation service—sat in the conference during part of the afternoon session, but there was no indication of any substantial progress toward agreement.

The railroads apparently most seriously affected were the Baltimore & Ohio and the New York Central.

Vice President Charles W. Galloway said in response to inquiries that the B. & O., with coal supplies for only six or seven more days, might be forced soon to curtail its operations to the essential job of keeping foodstuffs moving unless the union and operators made a settlement soon and thus reopened the Appalachian mines.

"Playing Hob With Business"

The B. & O. Galloway added, was losing $100,000 a day in freight revenues and had laid off several thousand men in a "virtual shutdown" of its shops.

In Cleveland, a spokesman for the New York Central—which like the B. & O. normally does a big business in carrying bituminous—said a number of that line's shops had been closed and that "the coal strike's just playing hob with business."

(The term "strike" has been used by operators, while the union insists that "lockout" is the proper definition).

The Association of American Railroads estimated 9,000 railroad men were idle on coal carrying roads.

Doughton Sees President

By the Associated Press.

Representative Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina took up with President Roosevelt yesterday what he termed as a serious situation facing some industries in his State as a result of the shutdown of soft coal mines in the Appalachian field.

"Some industries in my State, I am informed, are on the verge of shutting down because of the shortage of coal," Doughton said.

Fort Washington

Fort Washington, established in 1645 by the Colonists, on the strategic bluffs opposite Alexandria, is an important historical landmark. One of the interesting sights is this arched entry, looking over a wooden bridge, spanning an old moat. Drive down to Fort Washington this week-end—it has lots of pictorial possibilities.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

"Why do so many women who have well-regulated homes play cards in clubs?" asked Elsie Gray, English bridge expert now associated with the West End Bridge Club at the Hotel Alamac, Broadway and Seventy-first Street, in her interesting booklet called "The Human Side of Bridge." She then proceeds to answer the question this way:

"The woman who likes bridge would rather play at a club and pay for that privilege than accept invitations to card 'parties' exuding a marshmallow atmosphere.

"There is no sane reason why home bridge should not be as enjoyable as club bridge, but the woman who delights in bridge as a hobby cares nothing for the frills and furbelows which jar her sense. She would rather pay for the privilege of playing cards and lose or win a small sum of money than play for a hand-embroidered towel or a box of stationery at her next door neighbor's.

"The very appearance of a club as one enters gives it a certain satisfaction. The neat, solid tables and chairs, the sensible ash trays, cards and score pads appeal at once to the eye. The lights are plain and good: if you are hungry you may order what appeals to you. If you wish to play for an hour and quit you may do so. You are under no obligation whatsoever, which is in itself a great relief. You are faced with no return engagements, which in the home you feel obliged to accept and repay, and the standard of bridge is immeasurably higher.

"Small stakes can be played for instead of prizes, which unquestionably is more pleasantly exciting. The monetary element is akin to innocent gambling, which most people consider a harmless pastime.

"I know of a group of four women who play for small stakes, but the individual winner does not collect the money. It is kept as a fund and in one year's time is used by the entire foursome for covering the expense of a pleasure trip. Of course this necessitates a foursome of constancy, but the same idea could be carried out by using a fund for charitable purposes and at the same time using your home as a haven for recreation and good fellowship."

The outstanding hand from the women's trials in England to select a representative team of four for the international matches to be played at The Hague in June is shown in today's box.

Out of the six women's teams of four to play the hand, two bid seven spades and made it, three bid six spades and were set four, and one bid six spades made seven.

The hand will produce thirteen tricks for East and West at either spades, diamonds or no trump. The teams were playing knockouts with cumulative, rubber bridge scoring, and so naturally the spade declaration was chosen for the trick value and 100 honors.

At the three tables, where the contract was defeated, a heart was opened and declarer after taking the first trick with the jack, led a small diamond from dummy to enter her own hand in order to draw trumps. South ruffed the diamond, and a cross-ruff in hearts and diamonds did the rest. After three ruffing tricks were made declarer was cut off from dummy and later had to concede two clubs.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

SENATOR ELLENDER returns to action this afternoon, possibly with the hearing of Federal employe union officials and certainly with a continuation of the Social Security Board cases. It was said that the union officials "possibly" would be heard because they would appear simply on the basis of an invitation. Ellender once before offered them the floor, but none appeared. The unions are not unfriendly to the hearings, but consider them as not necessarily affording the approach which unions long have followed. The S. S. B. officials and the complainants against them will appear not on invitation but by official notice. And these cases involving the S. S. B. have carried more rancor than any Ellender has produced.

LAYTON S. HAWKINS for the past three years supervisor and consultant to the WPA in its adult education program in New York City, has been appointed chief of the Trade and Industrial Education Service in the Office of Education, Interior Department, Secretary Ickes announced today. Hawkins has a long career, beginning with his membership on the staff appointed by the Federal Board for Vocational Education in 1917. Among his new responsibilities will be the promotion and efficient operation of trade and industrial education throughout the United States.

CONGRATULATIONS to Ed. Ballard and Merle Sager for the party they sponsored Tuesday night on behalf of the Federal employes who went on the Government-sponsored cruise to Puerto Rico last July. It was they who took the brilliantly colored movies and "stills" that delighted the audience for an hour. Incidentally, Sager read a letter from Gov. Winship, of Puerto Rico, inviting the whole crowd to come back down there. He said he would throw another swell dance for them.

T. T. HAILEY, president, Railroad Retirement Board Athletic Association, announces a cabaret dance the organization will sponsor Saturday night, April 29, at the Wardman Park Hotel. The association, he says, is representative of the RRB employes in athletic and welfare work and was formed to promote their interests.

THE Treasury Department Recreation Association will hold its spring dance in the main ballroom of the Wardman Park Hotel Saturday evening . . . Here is another invitation to enter the "Beauty and Brains" contest sponsored by The Post in co-operation with the American Federation of Government Employes. The result of it will be a trip for some feminine employe to the New York World's Fair, the spotlight she will have there on Government employes' day, and a handsome loving cup. The dead-line, remember, is May 5 . . . With Chancellor Willis E. Nowell (GAO) occupying the chair, there will be a "pledging smoker" held by the Oliver Wendell Holmes (Theta) Chapter, Sigma Nu Phi, International Legal Fraternity, this Saturday night at 1755 Q street northwest. The guest speaker will be Joseph O. Janousek, chairman of the American Bar Association's section of international and comparative law. His subject will be "The Law as a Profession" . . . The Education Committee, WPA Local 1, U. F. W. A., says that Col. F. C. Harrington and other WPA officials will participate in a series of Tuesday luncheons, beginning next week. The meetings are designed to acquaint the WPA administrative staff with the history, meaning and future of the works program. The education committee intends the series to be the beginning of an in-service training course for WPA employes.

Bob Burns Says—

Out here in Hollywood they've got a big lion farm and they use a lot of these lions in pictures. The other day I drove my family out there to see these lions. And they all run around in one great big inclosure that's built kinda like a jungle. Every afternoon they give a show, and the trainer goes in there with all these lions and they do a lot of tricks for him.

After the show was over I got to talkin' to the trainer and I says, "Ain't them lions awful dangerous?"

He says, "Well, they could be if they wanted to, but they're all right because we never tease 'em."

I guess that's the way with people, too. Like the time my Aunt Peachy Sims had a boy friend call on her one night and Grandpaw Snazzy stayed down stairs and talked to him for awhile, then he went upstairs to bed. About an hour later he heard Aunt Peachy callin' to him, so Grandpaw went to the head of the stairs and asked what was the matter. Aunt Peachy says, "Grandpaw, you come down here and make Hubert quit teasin' me!" Grandpaw says, "What's he doin'?" Aunt Peachy says, "What's he doin'! Why, he's sittin' clear down at the other end of the sofa!"

Her Majesty the Queen:

Elizabeth Was Hostess at Glamis During Courtship and Proposal

Mother's Illness Kept Family at Scottish Home

By Lady Cynthia Asquith

CHAPTER X.

The summer of 1921 was a very difficult time for our future Queen. It was hoped that the warm months at Glamis would be good for Lady Strathmore, who had been very ill in the spring, but while up in Scotland she grew worse, and for the time being became a complete invalid. Meanwhile Glamis was almost continuously full of guests, and the whole responsibility of their entertainment devolved on the daughter of the house. It was then that the Duke of York paid his second visit, on this occasion accompanied by Queen Mary. Apparently undismayed, the young Lady Elizabeth proved herself a perfect hostess.

Hostess at Glamis

During the whole of that winter and spring Queen Elizabeth was tethered by various duties to Glamis, and all spoke in the highest praise of the cool efficiency and gentle firmness with which she managed everything in that vast establishment, simultaneously winning her spurs both as hostess and as housekeeper.

The success with which she then dealt with various domestic crises proved the iron determination which, to some extent, is camouflaged by her smile. Whatever she may undertake is carried off with a gayety and cordiality which cloak the real strength of her personality But though she may fight with masked batteries, her purpose is nearly always fulfilled.

Toward the end of 1922 Lady Elizabeth had become the subject of intense and widespread interest. It was common knowledge that the Duke of York had fallen in love with the enchanting girl with whom he was so often seen dancing, and it was said that he intended to ask her to be his wife. Conjecture was busy. Would Lady Elizabeth feel that the acceptance of her royal suitor would involve too complete a sacrifice of the independence and privacy which is the birthright of every subject? Would she be afraid to undertake a life of royal duties? Would she hesitate? Would she decline? Would she accept? Curiosity hummed.

Elizabeth, as Duchess of York, officiated at the opening of a club for boys and girls at Dagenham, England

Became Engaged

Whatever qualms Queen Elizabeth may have felt, whatever misgivings as to her qualifications for so great a responsibility; when the time for decision came these qualms and misgivings ceased to be determining factors. She found the question was no longer one of judgment, but of impulse. Feelings took command and acceptance became inevitable.

On Saturday, January 13, 1923, the Prince came to stay at St. Paul's Waldenbury. The next morning he and Lady Elizabeth decided not to accompany the other members of the party to church.

They preferred to walk in the beloved wood of her childhood; "the wood, the haunt of fairies."

Before they left this glamorous wood, "where the sun always seemed to be shining," the Prince had declared his suit, and the "youngest daughter" in England's latest fairy story had joyfully consented to begin to live happily ever afterward.

On Monday morning the Prince returned to London. Later in the same day he went to Sandringham to tell his parents of the engagement, to which he had, of course, already obtained their consent.

Exciting News Was Out

To every girl the first days of her engagement are exciting days. To Lady Elizabeth they must have been more than bewildering. In a letter she wrote: "I feel very happy, but quite dazed. We hoped we were going to have a few days' peace first, but the cat is now completely out of the bag and there is no possibility of stuffing him back."

The cat was indeed out of the bag. When Lady Elizabeth motored up to London, it was to see her name blazing from every poster and to find her home in Bruton street raided by the press, who continued to lay siege to it for the rest of the week.

She was at once snowed under by telegrams and letters, and from that day her post has never again resumed normal dimensions.

Medical Trust Case Ready For Decision

Proctor to Rule on Extent of Law's Control of Medicine

Justice Proctor received for decision yesterday the question of how much social control the law imposes on the medical profession, which had been argued three days before him and is scheduled to evoke a Supreme Court declaration on which may be founded the public health policy of the United States.

Argument closed on the American Medical Association's motion for dismissal of the criminal conspiracy charge which followed eight weeks of investigation of the campaign against Group Health Association, Inc.

Allan E. Hart, special assistant to the Attorney General, concluded an exhaustive review of Anglo-American law on the subject, which reached back to the fifteenth century, with the assertion that the healing arts must be regulated by the same laws as any other trade. Trade, said Hart, included every occupation in which money habitually was received, under contract, for money's worth.

Leahy Closes Argument

William E. Leahy, closing the argument for "organized medicine," retorted that Government control of "trade" so broadly defined, would extend until "it could destroy any form of human activity."

Leahy said such a broadening of Federal Government power was "contrary to the Constitution and to principles of human freedom as old as Anglo-Saxon civilization."

Leahy and Hart were the last of a series of attorneys who have been debating the question in District Court for three days, drawing their authority from dozens of law books which covered the counsel table and from tall piles of memoranda compiled in months of research.

Limited to Economics

The silver-haired justice listened intently, but asked no more than half a dozen questions in the three days of oratory, although there have been occasions when he examined counsel closely about their contentions. He gave only one indication of his impression from the arguments whether medicine is a "trade" and subject to the Sherman anti-trust act, as the Government claims, or a "profession" and immune to such regulation, as the defense asserts.

When the defense arguments that the indictment ought to be quashed were concluded, Justice Proctor ordered Government counsel to confine themselves to the economics of the medical question. The defense had not introduced the argument that physicians act from altruistic motives, said Proctor, and the case was to be treated as a business matter.

Among the spectators as the first round of the medical fight closed were several of the 21 prominent physicians indicted with A. M. A. and officers of the three other organizations accused of criminal conspiracy. The other organizations are District Medical Society, Harris County (Tex.) Medical Society and Washington Academy of Surgery.

Justice Proctor probably will take two weeks or more to prepare his opinion. Both sides are expected to file additional briefs and citations of authorities.

Should the justice quash the indictment it would have the effect of closing the case in favor of "organized medicine," unless reversed by a higher court. Should the indictment be upheld the next proceeding would be a trial of the criminal conspiracy charges, which it has been estimated would take ten weeks or more.

North Carolinians To Elect Tonight

Election of officers for 1939-40 will precede a reception and dance by the North Carolina State Society at the Shoreham tonight at 8:30. Mrs. W. H. 15 Children Hurt, Man Killed in Collision

Rocky Mount, N. C., April 19 (AP). Fifteen school children were injured and a colored man was killed in a collision near here today between a school bus and a fertilizer truck.

Down Carolina Way, Folk Songs Essential, Delegation Head Says

Dr. Mary Martin Sloop, director of the Crossnore School in North Carolina, here for the D. A. R. Congress, reads to two of her pupils, Juanita Parker, 10, and Ruth Thomas, 11. A group of the Crossnore students, who will render mountain songs and dances today before the D. A. R., will be in Washington next week to take part in the sixth annual National Folk Festival

Down in the Carolina mountains, folk songs and dances come in the same category with food and clothing. They're essentials.

When leaders of the National Folk Festival first invited Crossnore School, at Crossnore, N. C., to participate in the festival next week, Dr. Mary Martin Sloop, its director, was skeptical. "Our mountain people hardly have enough to eat or to wear. How can we afford to send children to Washington?"

But months passed and somehow Dr. Sloop scraped the money together. In Washington with eight of her youngsters to appear at the D. A. R. congress, she said yesterday that the festival finally had worked its way into the school budget, and come the children would.

Twelve pupils will represent Crossnore at the National Folk Festival, which opens April 27 for three days at Constitution Hall. They will sing songs and perform the dances brought to the mountains by their British ancestors. Also on their program will be traditional mountain folk expression which has grown up during the centuries in isolated hill communities.

Crossnore probably is the only school in the country built of old clothes. Dr. Sloop and her husband, also a doctor of medicine, arrived in the tiny village soon after their marriage. As they tended to the physical needs of the people they were impressed by the intelligence and the longing for education they met everywhere.

Seeking to raise money for schooling, "Miz" Sloop began writing to relatives, then to acquaintances and finally to total strangers for donations of old clothes. She sold the dresses to the mountain women and with the proceeds sent the most deserving young people away to school. At length business and cash donations reached such large proportions that she was able to build a school at Crossnore and provide teachers for it.

The school now is one of the best in the State. Two hundred children board there and nearly 1,000 more are day pupils. Roads have been built, and the people of the Crossnore section no longer are isolated. Illiteracy has been blotted out in the section.

The obstacles in Dr. Sloop's path were not merely the financial ones which still beset the school. Before the institution could be successful, parents must be persuaded to release the children from chores to attend classes. The children themselves proved ardent allies in this campaign, according to Dr. Sloop.

"They were eager to come and we told them they could help a great deal," she explained yesterday. "First they were to beg not to be kept home to dig potatoes or pick beans. If this failed they were to cry—not a little soft sob, but a loud, heart-broken and head-rending wail. The pride of the parents in children as crazy over school as that covered their defeat in getting the potatoes dug, and sometimes they acknowledged they would rather do without the children's help than to stand the noise.

"When this method failed, there was still one more, and that was to pout. They were to work, of course, but not pleasantly, and never crack a smile all day. As a last resort, we would invoke the compulsory education law."

Mrs. Randle Defends $500 Fee on Stand

Wrote Gov. Earle To Excuse Boy From Exams, She Testifies

Mrs. Rosalyn Randle yesterday took the stand in District Court to defend her $500 fee for treating a 19-year-old University of Pennsylvania honor student, allegedly suffering from an urge to kill himself, as "about half the usual charge."

Her services in the case of Rufus Reed, Mrs. Randle testified, included writing a letter to George Earle, then Governor of Pennsylvania, "to see if we could get the boy off from his mid-year examinations, because of his nervous condition." Reed took his examinations, however, and passed with honors, according to previous testimony.

Recalling other cases under her care in a 20-year career as a builder of health, poise and personality, Mrs. Randle said she had "worked many weeks with Smith Reynolds," heir to the tobacco fortune who was slain in 1932. Young Reynolds, she said, was subject to "acute mental depression," similar to the melancholia which she claims afflicted the Reed youth.

The court yesterday denied a motion for a directed verdict of acquittal, entered by Defense Attorney Robert H. McNeill.

Mrs. Randle traced her career as a dietitian and psychologist. She holds the degree of Master of Naturopathy from the American School of Naturopathy in New York City, she explained.

"I have never professed that I could diagnose or cure disease," Mrs. Randle declared. "I obey the laws of my country."
